THE attention of the Literary Public is respectfully requested to the Books contained in this Catalogue. The editions are generally those best fitted for Libraries, printed on large type, in substantial and appropriate bindings. The collector will find here many of the rarer English Books; and gentlemen forming Libraries, it is believed, can hardly consult any American Catalogue where they will meet with so large a number of valuable Standard Works.

We beg particularly to call attention to the very valuable French collection of the Messrs. Didot. Perhaps there is no other instance of so valuable, and at the same time, beautifully printed and cheap a collection of books in the world.

We would also mention the new edition of the "Encyclopædia Britannica," now in course of publication, as especially worthy the examination of all readers. "This great work may be regarded as a dictionary of science, a repository of history and biography, a book of universal reference, and is, in fact, a library of itself."

A separate Catalogue of our extensive collection of Law Books has just been published, which the profession can receive gratis, on application.

Our friends are reminded, that orders for Books from England, France, and Germany are forwarded regularly, by every Steamer from Boston; to competent and faithful agents in London, Paris, and Leipsic.

LITTLE, BROWN & CO.'S

- 4 ADAMS (John). The Works of, with a Life of the Author, Notes and Illustrations, by his Grandson, Hon. Charles F. Adams. 10 vols. 8vo, cloth, portrait, etc., 22.50. Boston, 1856

This collection is edited by the Hon. Charles Francis Adams, the depository of all the Manuscripts, as well of John Adams, as of his father the late John Quincy Adams; and is intended as the first of two great publications, elucidating the History of the Rise and Progress of these United States, from the year 1761, in which the Revolutionary struggle first began, down to the year 1848, when the younger Adams died.

"It is a work for the statesman to read and study, as he would reach the highest end to which an honorable political ambition can aspire, — the promotion of his country's truest interests. It is a work especially suited to our young men, — fitted at once to quicken their intellects, to form their taste, and to purify and exalt their patriotism. It is a work with which we can well afford to identify our national reputation. It will prove an enduring witness to our country's honor, as it is fitted to strengthen our faith in the stability of her institutions." — Puritan Recorder.

"Every student of American history, American laws, usages, and institutions, should make himself acquainted with these papers, containing as they do the reflections of a mind of great comprehension, deep sagacity, and extensive learning, on the fundamental principles of government." — National Era.

- 5 ——— large paper edition, 10 vols. roy. 8vo, cloth, 30.00. Boston, 1856
- 6 ADDISON. The Works of the Rt. Hon. Joseph Addison, Esq., 4 vols. 4to, (Tonson's ed.) a fine copy, full tree calf, 25.00. London, 1721

"The mere choice and arrangement of his words would have sufficed to make his essays classical. For never, not even by Dryden, not even by Temple, had the English language been written with such sweetness, grace, and facility. . . . This was the smallest part of Addison's praise. As a moral satirist he stands unrivalled. If ever the best Tatlers and Spectators were equalled in their own kind, we should be inclined to guess that it must have been by the lost comedies of Menander." — Macaulay.

- 7 ——— (Right Hon. Joseph). The Works of, a new edition, with Notes, by Richard Hurd, Lord Bishop of Woreester, 6 vols. 8vo, calf, 24.00. London, 1811
- 8 ADVENTURER (The), projected by Dr. Hawsworth, 3 vols. 16mo, cloth, portrait, 2.25. Boston, 1856

The contributors to these Essays were Dr. Hawsworth, Dr. Johnson, Dr. Bathurst, Dr. Warton, Mr. Colman, and Mrs. Chapone, — their several papers throughout the whole of these Essays have been assigned to their respective authors.

"Akenside holds a high place among British Poets. He had all the qualities, natural and acquired, of a great poet. His mind was imbued with classic lore, with lofty conceptions, and that love and knowledge of nature which no book can communicate. His ear was correct, and his blank verse deserves to be studied by all who would excel in this truly English measure. His Inscriptions are among the best in our language, and Southey and Wordsworth have profited largely by them." — Cunningham.

- 21 AKERMAN (John Yonge). A Numismatic Manual, 8vo, cloth, plates of coins, 4.50. London, 1840
 - 22 ALBINOVANI (C. P.). Elegiæ III. et Fragmenta cum interpretatione et Notis Scaligeri et Aliorum. Et Severi Ætna and quæ supersunt fragmenta cum notis et interpretatione Scaligeri, Lindenbruchii and Goralli, etc., 12mo, calif, red leaves, 3.75. Amsterdam, 1715

 - 25 ——— History of Europe from the Commencement of the French Revolution in 1789 to the Restoration of the Bourbons in 1815; 20 vols. post 8vo, cloth, 25.00; full calif, gilt, 45.00. Edinburgh, 1853
- "No work could have made such progress in national opinion without substantial qualities. Its vigor of research and its manliness of principle, its accurate knowledge, and its animation of style, have been the grounds of its remarkable public favor, as they are the guarantees for its permanent popularity." — Blackwood's Magazine.
- 26 ——— History of Europe from the Commencement of the French Revolution in 1789, to the Restoration of the Bourbons in 1815; 13 vols. 12mo, cloth, 12.50. London, 1853
- "We therefore hasten to preface our less favorable remarks by freely acknowledging that the present work is, upon the whole, a valuable addition to European Literature; that it is evidently compiled with the utmost care, and that its narration is not perverted by the slightest partiality. . . . Its merits are minuteness and honesty. . . . The stirring interest of the event which he relates, his judgment in selecting striking traits of character for preservation, his earnest seriousness of manner, and his obvious honesty of purpose, all combine to make his narrative on the whole both interesting and impressive." — Edinburgh Review.
- 27 ——— History of Europe from the Fall of Napoleon in 1815 to the Accession of Louis Napoleon in 1851, vols. 1 to 5, 3.50 each. London, 1854

Published by authority of the Secretary of the Navy, royal 8vo, paper, 1.50. Washington, 1855

33 AMES (Seth). The Works of Fisher Ames; with a Selection from his Speeches and Correspondence. Edited by his Son, 2 vols. 8vo, with portrait, cloth, 4.50, full calf, 7.50.

Boston, 1854

"We congratulate the public on possessing the works of one of so elevated a genius and so pure a fame, in a form which must satisfy the most fastidious taste." — Christian Examiner.

"These volumes, as was the man, are an honor to our country; and they will be extensively read by old men and young men, especially those in political life and of the legal profession. The numerous letters in the first volume are rich in information relating to the origin and early history of our government." — Norton's Gazette.

"It is a very substantial addition to the political literature of the country." — New York Evening Post.

“D'Anquetil is a writer of great reputation, and undertook the work at the recommendation of Bonaparte, who very sensibly desired him to draw up a history of France, which could be read, disencumbered of those details which make the volumes of the French historians so repulsive and fatiguing.”—Prof. Smyth.

50. ANSON (George), A Voyage round the World in 1740-4, by —, Commander-in-Chief of a Squadron of His Majesty's Ships sent upon an Expedition to the South Seas; compiled from the Author's Papers, by Richard Walter, M. A., with 42 copper-plates, 4to, calf, extra, 5.50. London, 1748

"Anson's Voyage will contribute more to call forth genius, and open the blossoms of the mind, than a dull didactic treatise of the most sagacious Philosopher." — Knox's Essays.

- 51 APPIANUS ALEXANDRINI. Romanarum Historiarum, quæ supersunt, Græce et Latine, cum indicibus, royal 8vo, paper, 3.75; half calf, 5.00. Paris, Didot, 1840

"In the reigns of Trajan, Hadrian, and Antoninus Pius, an advocate at Rome, and one of the Finance Directors in the Provinces, wrote a history of the Romans, arranged according to the nations connected with it, in twenty-four Books, but of which only half are extant." — Mathiæ.

- ✓ 53 ARABIAN NIGHTS ENTERTAINMENTS. Translated by Edward William Lane, with Explanatory Notes, new and elegant edition, with six hundred wood-cuts, by William Harvey, complete in royal 8vo, cloth, 4.00; half calf, 5.00; calf, 5.50. London, 1853

"This noble octavo, with its nine hundred closely but clearly printed pages, and its six hundred illustrative wood-cuts, contains all the wonderful tales of the 'Thousand and One Nights,' without abridgment, and in the best translation. It should be in every library or on every parlor table. No other book conveys so vivid an idea of the genius of the East. The wretched substitute for such an edition as the present, which, with all its imperfections, charmed the youth of the men of the present generation, will now literally hide its diminished head. No person can be said to have read the Arabian Nights, unless he has read this complete translation by Lane. The wood-cuts, by Harvey, are exquisitely executed, and lend an enchantment of their own to the enchantments of the stories they illustrate. It is impossible to look at this splendid volume, much less look into it, without desiring to possess it; and, of the many publications which this great Boston house has issued, there are few better calculated for extensive and permanent popularity than this superb edition of the Arabic classic." — Boston Transcript.

- 54 ——— A new Translation from the Arabic, with copious Notes by Edward William Lane, 3 vols. royal 8vo, full calf gilt, marbled leaves, Illustrated by many hundred wood-cuts, from original designs by Harvey; fine early impressions; 35.00. London, 1839

"It is thus that legislation and politics become gradually regarded as experimental sciences, and history, not as formerly, the mere record of tyrannies and slaughters, which by immortalizing the execrable actions of one age, perpetuates the ambition of committing in every succeeding one, but as the archive of experiments, successful and unsuccessful, gradually accumulating towards the solution of the grand problem — how the advantages of government are to be secured with the least possible inconvenience to the governed." — Herschell.

- 92 BACON (Francis, Baron of Verulam and Lord High Chancellor of England). The Works of, collected and edited by James Spedding, M. A., Robert Leslie Ellis, M. A., and Douglas Denon Heath, Barrister at Law, vols. 1 to 5, 8vo, cloth, portrait. London, 1857

In this Edition the entire works will be distributed into three Divisions:—

- I. The Philosophical and Literary Works.
- II. The Professional Works (Law).
- III. The Occasional Works.

In every part of the work, pains will be taken to obtain an accurate text corrected according to the best possible authority, and to explain the time and circumstances in which each of the works first appeared. Of those which were written in Latin, or at least such portions of them as may be necessary to give a complete view of the Baconian Philosophy to an English reader, new translations will be given, or old translations newly revised. The Philosophical Works will be completed in 5 vols.

"For the first time an attempt has been made by minds of competent strength to understand and state Bacon's system in all its minute details, and to trace the real History of his Life. Nothing can exceed the conscientiousness with which every page of the volume has evidently been elaborated. Sometimes, indeed, this conscientiousness seems almost morbid, so full and precise is the statement of the mode in which all that we find written by the editors came to be written, and the admeasurement of the exact proportion of responsibility that falls on each of the co-laborers. But it is a great thing, in an age of hasty writing, to have work done so thoroughly; and all Englishmen, who are proud of the name of Bacon, must be glad to see so handsome and complete an edition of his works, and so conspicuous a tribute worthily paid to his memory. . . . Mr. Ellis's Essay points out that Bacon's philosophical position was really much more transitional than is ordinarily supposed, and although his language, his aim, the subjects of his chief interest, and his practical results belong to the schools of modern philosophy, yet the machinery of his thought, the assumptions of his system, and its inherent errors, belong to scholastic and mediæval times."—Saturday Review.

"We have, in this volume, which may readily be carried in the pocket, an edition of Bacon's Essays which leaves nothing to be desired. The text is illustrated by copious notes explanatory and critical; the Latin quotations with which the Essays are plentifully interlarded are translated; an interesting and full biographical sketch of Lord Bacon is given, and lastly, the typographical execution is attractive and beautiful." — Boston Journal.

"Among the host of new works, good, bad, and indifferent, now issuing from the press, it is really refreshing to find one like this, which has received the universal praise of three centuries, and still maintains its lofty position in the opinions of intelligent readers, firm as a rock amid all the varying tides of public opinion." — N. H. Patriot.

- 123 BANCROFT (Hon. George). A History of the United States from the Discovery of the American Continent, 6 vols. 8vo, cloth, portraits, maps, and plans, 12.75; half calf, 18.75; full calf, 21.75. Boston, 1856-7

"Aside from its artistic excellence, its remarkable unity, brilliant narrative, and vivid description, the whole work is full of facts that can be found nowhere else; for no one has had at command richer or more costly materials, or has brought to them greater ability or more persevering industry." — Boston Post.

"This noble theme has been treated with a beauty and a power by one whom I need not name in this presence (the historian of the "United States"); which, without impairing their authenticity, have converted the several pages of our history into a magnificent Odyssey of national adventure." — Everett's Lecture on the Discovery of America.

"The further this work proceeds, the more do we feel that it must take its place as an essentially satisfactory history of the United States." — London Athenæum.

"The work is a boon to the nation, and as such it should be considered by the community." — Newark Daily Advertiser.

"At once a philosopher, a poet, a statesman, and an assiduous student, it is not surprising that he has produced a monument of genius and toil which embodies the highest attributes of the intellect, and will challenge the admiration of ages." — New York Quarterly Review.

"Bancroft is the acknowledged historian of the United States. His work is, and must be, the standard history of the country, and, as such, should reach every family, and be studied by every person who would be acquainted with the events of our past existence." — New Haven Journal.

"The study of Bancroft should be insisted on as equally the duty and privilege of every American. His history should fill a place in every house, second only to the Bible. In no other way can the rising generation be so ably instructed in all that pertains to the rise of our free institutions, or become indoctrinated in the principles of genuine American Republicanism." — Augusta Age.

Cet ouvrage comprendra 6 volumes; le premier sera consacré aux généralités préliminaires, à l'étude des corps non métalliques, à leurs combinaisons entre eux. Il traitera des acides et de l'ammoniaque, de l'éclairage au gaz, et de tout ce qui est susceptible d'application dans l'industrie.

Le second traitera des métaux en général, de leurs oxydes, sulphates et sels. On y décrira les procédés industriels au moyen desquels on obtient en grand les combinaisons utiles dans l'industrie, la fabrication du verre, du cristal, des glaces, des émaux, etc.

Le troisième traitera exclusivement de la métallurgie et des procédés analytiques les plus simples et les plus commodes pour faire l'essai des minerais par la voie immédiate, la voie sèche.

Dans le quatrième, on traitera de la chimie organique sous le point de vue général.

Le cinquième aura pour but les applications industrielles et les matières pour la fabrication du papier, du carton; les diverses boissons, entre autres, le vin artificiel, l'alcool; la blanchisserie, la teinture, le tannage, etc.

Le sixième sera entièrement consacré à la chimie appliquée à l'agriculture; on y traitera des terrains, de leur analyse, des moyens de les amender, des engrais naturels ou artificiels les plus convenables aux diverses cultures que l'on veut entreprendre.

- 140 BAXTER (Richard). The Practical Works of, with a Preface, giving some account of the Author, and of this edition of his Practical Works, 4 vols. folio, old calf, 38.00. London, 1707

"Baxter's language is plain and perspicuous when his object is merely to inform; copious and flowing when he exhorts; and when he yields to the current of his feelings, it becomes redundant and impassioned, and occasionally picturesque and graphic. There are innumerable passages of the most touching pathos and unconscious eloquence, but not a single sentence written for effect." — Edinburgh Review, vol. 70.

- 141 BAYLE (Peter). General Dictionary, Biographical, Historical, and Critical, translated by Des Maisseaux; 5 vols. folio, old calf, 40.00. London, 1734

"The learning of Bayle was copious, especially in what was most peculiarly required, the controversies, the anecdotes, the miscellaneous facts and sentences, scattered over the vast surface of literature for two preceding centuries. . . . He is admirable in exposing the fallacies of dogmatism, the perplexities of philosophy, and the weaknesses of those who affect to guide the opinions of mankind." — Hallam.

"The 'Minstrel,' exhibiting the development of the poetical faculty in the mind of a youthful genius, is a poem of great gracefulness and elegance, and is read with delight for the scholar-like beauty and correctness of its construction, though it does not reach the higher circle of the poetical idea." — Scrymgeour.

London, 1853

"Two men once united by friendship and forever by fame, the Dioscuri of our Zodiac, rose upon the horizon as the star of Shakspeare, though still in its fullest brightness, was declining in the sky. In Comedy they founded a new school, at least in England, the vestiges of which are still to be traced in our theatre. Their language brilliant with wit, their measure, though they do not make great use of prose, very lax and rapid, running frequently to lines of thirteen and fourteen syllables. Few of their comedies are without a mixture of grave sentiments or elevated characters; and though there is much to condemn in their indecency and even licentiousness of principle, they never descend to the coarse buffoonery not unfrequent in their age. Never were dramatic poets more thoroughly gentlemen according to the standard of their times." — Hallam.

Cet ouvrage, publié sous les auspices du ministère de l'instruction publique, donne le récit des fouilles exécutées à Athènes et la description, d'après des documents nouveaux, des monuments de l'Acropole.

Quatre planches, dessinées par M. Lebouteux, architecte de l'Académie de Rome, terminent le premier volume: 1o vue pittoresque de l'Acropole et de la nouvelle entrée (in-8o); 2o plan général des Propylées et de la nouvelle entrée (in 4o); 3o coupe sur l'axe du plan général (in 4o); 4o élévation et détails (in 4o).

Quatre planches terminent également le second volume: 1o plan général de l'Acropole (in 4o), dessiné par M. Desbuisson, de l'Académie de Rome; 2o plan restauré du Parthénon (in 8o), par M. Paccard, de l'Académie de Rome; 3o plan et coupes restaurés de l'Erechthéion (in 4o), par M. Tetaz, de l'Académie de Rome; 4o danse pyrrhique et chœur cyclique, bas-reliefs trouvés dans les fouilles (in-4o), dessinés par MM. de Curzon et Lebouteux, de l'Académie de Rome.

Ces planches ont été gravées par M. Lemaitre. Tous les textes grecs et latins qui ont trait à l'Acropole, à son histoire à ses monuments, à ses moindres détails ont été transcrits soigneusement dans les notes. Les nombreuses inscriptions que M. Beulé a jugées utiles pour les indications topographiques et la restauration complète de l'Acropole ont été reproduites dans les notes en caractères spéciaux, qui copient les caractères des inscriptions elles-mêmes.

- 170 ——— Études sur le Péloponnèse. 1 volume renfermant une série de recherches archéologiques sur les principaux points du Péloponnèse: 1o l'art à Sparte; 2o voyage en Arcadie; 3o la Triphylie; 4o l'Elide et la Cité Olympique; 5o l'Achaïe; 6o Sicyone et ses écoles de peinture et de sculpture; 7o Corinthe et l'Isthme. Ce volume, d'environ 500 pages, fait suite à l'ouvrage précédent, paper, 2.50.

Les études sur le Péloponnèse complètent les études sur l'Acropole d'Athènes. Après avoir décrit les chefs-d'œuvre de l'art athénien, l'auteur rend justice à Sparte, l'ennemie d'Athènes, et montre ce qu'elle a fait aussi pour les arts. Il parcourt ensuite le Péloponnèse, s'arrêtant partout où il rencontre une question neuve, un monument inconnu, par exemple les trois grandes inscriptions d'Olympie, qui lui ont permis de reconstituer la cité olympique aux IIIe et IVe siècles après J. C.

"Mr. Lamb's translation of Boeckh's Public Economy of Athens is a most important addition to the resources of classical students. I have always regarded this work as the masterpiece of its distinguished author, and as a monument of sagacity and erudition hardly to be equalled in the department of literature to which it belongs.

"Having read Mr. Lamb's translation in the sheets, I think it only justice to say, that it is executed with great fidelity and accuracy. He has had unusual success in rendering with precision the sense of the original; while the pains he has taken in adjusting weights, measures, and values, to standards familiar to students in this country, will make his version particularly useful here. I cannot doubt, therefore, that it will be universally adopted in the classical schools and colleges of the United States." — Professor C. C. Felton.

- 255 BOWEN (F.). Principles of Political Economy applied to the Condition, Resources, and the Institutions of the American People, 8vo, cloth, 2.25. Boston, 1856

"It is a manual comprising in an accessible and intelligible form, the latest facts and principles in the progressive science to which it relates, and is especially valuable because it states those facts and principles in their relations to America, where the nature of the institutions and the state of society obviously modify in many respects the deductions obtained by English writers from their own different experience, and too often adopted here without revision or amendment. Professor Bowen writes with perspicuity and force." — Boston Daily Advertiser.

"The author, from his position, is eminently fitted for the design and execution of the plan he has developed in this volume, to lay the foundation of an American system of political economy. The work contains much useful information respecting banking operations, the system of disposing of public lands, the nature of bills of exchange, the functions of the currency, the supply of precious metals, and home and international trade, rendering it a valuable work of study or reference to young men who purpose entering the mercantile profession." — Buffalo Courier.

"Probably the most elaborate and thorough treatise upon the science of political economy that has ever been prepared in this country or even in Great Britain." — Boston Atlas.

"A thorough mastery of the science, fixed opinions ably defended, intimate conversance with the antecedent literature of this department, and a style lucid, compact, and forceful, render the work a compend of prime value to the student, and of high interest to the general reader." — N. A. Review.

Bowen — Political Economy

- 256 BOWEN'S (Francis) Lowell Lectures, on the Application of Metaphysical and Ethical Science to the Evidence of Religion. 8vo, cloth, 2.00. Boston, 1849

"Mr. Bowen's Lectures were received with very great satisfaction as they were delivered before auditors fit, and yet not few. Now that they are in print, we believe that they will be regarded as exhibiting signal ability, and as possessing very high merits, by those who, not having been hearers, shall give them a careful perusal. . . . We shall be disappointed if his volume is not received as a most valuable contribution to speculative philosophy, not merely by men of the conservative and cautious schools, but by the mass of those deliberate and unprejudiced readers who know that they belong to any party. . . . We commend this volume, first of all, because it is written in the vernacular tongue, in good, wholesome English. It is free from barbarisms, Germanisms, and all affectations. The author knew what he wished to say, and he says it in a way to let us know what it was." — Christian Examiner.

Considerable light has been thrown on the Fluxionary controversy, by the author's having obtained, through the kindness of Lord Brougham, the collection of MSS. and correspondence arranged by the late Mr. H. A. Fellows. Much new information is also communicated respecting the History of the Principia. Sir David has likewise been enabled to complete the correspondence between Newton and Halley, first published in its genuine state by Mr. Rigaud, to give publicity to the most interesting of the manuscripts in which Newton's religious opinions are recorded, and to print for the first time, letters of John Bernoulli, Varignon, Montmort, the Abbe Condi, Fontenelle, Pope, Pepys, John Locke, Flamstead, and others.

"No greater service can be done in the good cause of letters than the extensive dissemination of these standard compositions. They embrace the best models of style in the English language. They are truly works that no library, even of the most meagre pretensions, can afford to be without." — Boston Daily Advertiser.

The origin of the "Essayists" is curious. Swift, in his time, undertook to ridicule the predictions of one John Partridge, an astrologer and prophet, which he did, very successfully, under the name of Isaac Bickerstaff, and thereby made the name famous. Sir Walter Scott says, "The most memorable consequence of the predictions of Isaac Bickerstaff was the establishment of the Tatler, the first of that long series of periodical works, which, from the days of Addison to those of Mackenzie, have enriched our literature with so many effusions of genius, humor, wit, and learning; by the assumption of the name of Isaac Bickerstaff, which an inimitable spirit of wit and humor had made so famous, the new publication gained audience with the public, and obtained, under its authority, a sudden and general acceptance. It appears that Swift was in the secret of Steele's undertaking from the beginning, though Addison only discovered it after the publication of the sixth number."

- 281 ——— A Complete Collection of the British Poets, from Chaucer to Wordsworth; embracing the whole Works of the most Distinguished Authors, with Selections from the Minor Poets; accompanied with Biographical, Historical, and Critical Notices. Edited by F. J. Child, Professor of Rhetoric and Oratory in Harvard College; 16mo, uniform with the Aldine Poets. Boston, 1854-57

This edition will embrace all that is of general interest and permanent value in English poetry, from Chaucer to Wordsworth. Several volumes of fugitive and anonymous poetry will be added, besides what may be taken from the publications of Ritson, Percy, Ellis, Brydges, Park, etc., of the Percy Society, and other Printing Clubs. Particular care will be bestowed on Chaucer, and on the English and Scotch Ballad Poetry. Pains will be taken to secure a correct text; and each work will be accompanied with Biographical, Historical, and Critical Notices, and with Glossaries, where such assistance is needed.

Each poet is sold by itself, and the price of each volume, in cloth, with paper label, or in black, gilt lettered, is .75; in half calf, gilt back, 1.50; full calf, gilt, marbled leaves, 1.75. The following volumes are now ready:—

"It is by far the best edition of these Poets that has ever been issued in this country; fully equal to the English, of which they are an exact reprint, and at just one half the cost." — Boston Atlas.

"We cannot too warmly commend the series to our readers." — Southern Literary Gazette.

"We do not know any other edition of the English Poets which combines so many excellences." — Bibliotheca Sacra.

"The literary institutions will of course embrace the opportunity to secure so complete a series of the British Poets, and our High Schools should be supplied with it." — Ohio State Journal.

"The uniform and beautiful style in which the series is published, so far as paper and print are concerned, is excellent, and but one opinion exists as to the great merits of the enterprise." — Hunt's Magazine.

"The finest and best edition of the British Poets ever issued in this country." — Hingham Journal.

"This edition should grace every library, public and private; and he that may own it may not have cause to envy any one the possession of any other edition." — Louisville Journal.

* * L. B. & Co. propose to issue, if sufficient encouragement is given to the undertaking, an edition of their popular series of the British Poets, printed in the very best manner, on large paper, with portraits on India paper. The edition will be strictly limited to 250 copies, and will be sold only to subscribers; the price will be, in cloth, 1.50 per volume. The subscription list is now open, and names are being received.

"Not only will a large part of his productions be now brought together for the first time, but the entire series has been newly revised and very extensive and important additions have been made in every department. Many of the biographies are sketches from personal knowledge of the great men with whom he has lived. Many of the speeches must always be ranked with the finest specimens of English eloquence. Many of the treatises and articles are essential to a full understanding of the social and political history of the age in which he has been so prominent an actor; and though he must often carry us into debatable questions, the liquid lava has cooled with time, and we may tread with the calmness of philosophic inquirers, the ground which was once alive with the heat and passions of the hour." — Quarterly Review.

"Butler crowds into his confined circle all the treasures of art and the accumulations of learning. He gives full measure to his readers, heaped up, running over. Thought crowds upon thought, and witticism on witticism, in rapid and dazzling succession. Every topic and every incident is made the most of. His by-play always tells. Many of his happiest sallies appear to escape him as if by accident. Many of his hardest hits appear to be merely chance blows," etc. — Retrospective Review.

"It is not too much to say that it (The Pleasures of Hope), is the finest didactic poem in the English language . . . the delicacy of the thoughts, the beauty of the imagery, the occasional power of pathos, the extraordinary felicity of the language, and the wonderful harmony of the versification distinguish it from any poem written before or since, and entitle it to a very high place as a work of genius. . . . There are few lyrics in the language to be placed in comparison with the 'Mariners of England,' or the 'Battle of the Baltic,' and his exquisite poem of 'O' Connor's Child,' which has not unaptly been termed the diamond of this casket of gems, is greatly superior in pathos or passion to his more elaborate compositions." — Encyclopedia Britannica.

- 358 CANNING (Rt. Hon. George). Memoirs of the Life of, second edition, 2 vols. crown 8vo, half calf, neat, 5.00.

London, 1829

- 359 ——— The Speeches of, with a Memoir of his Life, by R. Therry, Esq., 6 vols. 8vo, half calf, neat, portrait, 27.00.

London, 1828

"Mr. Canning possessed, in a high degree, the outward advantages of an orator; his expressive countenance varied with the changes of his eloquence, his voice flexible and articulate, had as much compass as his mode of speaking required. In the calm part of his speeches, his attitude and gesture might have been selected by a painter to represent Grace and Dignity. No English speaker used the weapon of wit so long, so often, or so effectually, as Mr. Canning. He gained more triumphs, and incurred more enmity by it, than any other. The exuberance of fancy and wit lessened the gravity of his general manner, and perhaps also indisposed the audience to feel his correctness when it clearly showed itself." — Sir James Mackintosh.

London, 1849

"The greatest of modern sculptors, and the restorer of his art." — Rose's Biographical Dictionary.

- 361 CANTU (Cæsar). Histoire de Cent-Ans de 1750 à 1850; Histoire des Sciences, Littérature, Beaux-Arts, traduite de l'Italien, avec Notes et Observations par Amédée Rénée, 4 vols. 12mo, half morocco, 5.00.

Paris, 1852-1854

* * No period offers to the general reader more interest than that of the last hundred years. To this yesterday from which we have just issued, and to which we are bound by so many associations, the most lively curiosity is attached. It is from the middle of the 18th century that the movement dates which has entirely shaken to pieces the old order of things, and so profoundly modified all our institutions, and the history of this time, and of the different European States, is scattered in many particular books or only to be found in a few large works. M. C. Cantu, whose ability has won him success in his larger work, thanks to the terseness of his style and to the soberness of his narration, has condensed into this small work all the information it is necessary to know of these one hundred years.

The translator, M. A. Rénée, has added notes and corrections, and has thrown much light on a narrative, one of the chief merits of which is its concision.

- 362 ——— Histoire Universelle soigneusement remaniée par l'auteur et Traduite sous les yeux par Eugene Aroux et P. Leopardi, 19 vols. half morocco, marbled leaves, 38.00. • Paris, 1853

* * This work, first published in Italian, is completed in 19 volumes, each of which is devoted to an epoch: it has met with great favor, having reached a seventh edition, and it has been translated into other languages. This is the French translation, which has also met with success; it commences with the beginning of the world, and is continued to this time; it is an entire historic library wherein can be traced the progress of the human race in all parts of the world.

- "The great obstacle to Chapman's translations being read is their unconquerable quaintness. He pours out in the same breath the most just and natural, and the most violent and forced expressions. He seems to grasp whatever words come first to hand during the impetus of inspiration, as if all others must be inadequate to the divine meaning. But passion (the all in all in poetry) is everywhere present, raising the low, dignifying the mean, and putting sense into the absurd. He makes his readers glow, weep, tremble, take any affection which he pleases, be moved by words, or in spite of them be disgusted, and overcome their disgust. I have often thought that the vulgar misconception of Shakspeare as of a wild, irregular genius, in whom great faults are compensated by great beauties, would be true of Chapman." — Charles Lamb.

417 CHESTERFIELD. The Letters of Philip Dormer Stanhope, Earl of; including numerous Letters and Papers; now first published from the Original Manuscript; edited with Notes by Lord Mahon, 5 vols. cloth, complete, 9.00, with a General Index.
London, 1845-53

"The name of Lord Chesterfield has become a synonyme for good breeding and politeness. . . . But it recalls little or nothing of the statesman, the orator, the wit. We forget that this same little man was one of the best Lords-Lieutenant Ireland ever knew, the best speaker in the House of Lords till Pitt and Murray entered it, one of the most graceful essayists, and the wittiest man of quality of his time—a time when wit meant something more than pleasantry and sparkle," etc., etc. — Edinburgh Review.

418 CHEVREUL (M. E.). The Principles of Harmony and Contrast of Colors, and their Applications to the Arts. Translated from the French, by Charles Martel, crown 8vo, cloth, 3.25.
London, 1856

"M. Chevreul is the first writer who has really proved and explained the influence of simultaneous contrast of colors. The generality of books on this subject are empirical applications of Newton's analysis of the spectrum, and are overloaded with hypothetical analogies between sound and color, as purely imaginative as any simile of the poets. The harmony of color is no longer an uncertainty, but it is to be obtained by the modern manufacturer with as much certainty as it was by the builder of the Memnonium or the Alhambra. The foundation of M. Chevreul's fame rests upon this unanswerable dogma, that every color when placed beside another is changed, appearing different from what it really is, and moreover, equally modifies the color with which it is in proximity." — Athenæum.

"It was the current opinion of the University, that if the Great Turk or Devil had to be converted, Chillingworth would be able to do it." — Anthony A. Wood.

"The incomparable Chillingworth, the glory of his age and nation." — Tillotson.

"The constant reading of Chillingworth will teach perspicuity and reasoning, better than any book I know." — J. Locke.

"Chillingworth gave a softer tone to controversy, and struck out the most brilliant truths from the oracles of God, his school is that of acute perception and close reasoning." — Dibdin.

"Churchill may be ranked as a satirist immediately after Pope and Dryden, with perhaps a greater share of humor than either. He has the bitterness of Pope, with less wit to atone for it; but no mean share of the free manner and energetic plainness of Dryden." — Campbell.

"A noble vein of moral satire pervades his poems, and he stands forth the undaunted champion of liberty, the scourge of tyranny, and the firm friend of the Laws and Constitution of his country." — Tooke.

Geneva, 1758
- “No other orator, except Demosthenes, can compete with him in the art of hitting on every subject the appropriate expression, and the becoming hue of speech: he is as much a master in the impassioned, the pathetic, and the sublime, as he is in the smooth and simple style; his eloquence is rather that of the feelings, while that of Demosthenes appeals more to the understanding.” — Mathie.
- 429 ——— (Marcus Tullii). Opera, cum delectu commentariorum in usum Serenissimi Delfini, editio novissima cum Parisiensi, ac Patavina accuratissime collata, 7 vols. 4to, calf, gilt, 25.00.

- 433 ——— The Correspondence of Henry Hyde, Earl of Clarendon, and of his brother, Laurence Hyde, Earl of Rochester; with the Diary of Lord Clarendon, from 1687 to 1690, containing minute particulars of the Events attending the Revolution; and the Diary of Lord Rochester, during his Embassy to Poland, in 1676; edited from the original MS., with Notes, by Samuel Weller Singer, 2 vols. 4to, fine copy, plates, fac-similes, etc., calf, 10.00.
London, 1828
- “On the importance and history of a diary of the year of the revolution, kept by a nobleman of high rank and connection, an eye-witness of all the transactions of the court and government, and who was successfully admitted to the closets of James II. and the Prince of Orange, it is needless to dwell; the truth of its narrative may be the more securely relied upon, because it was evidently written from day to day, designed only to refresh Clarendon's own memory, and never intended for the inspection of others. A body of the most remarkable and authentic private evidence which has descended to us of the events connected with the Revolution of 1688.” — Monthly Review.
- 433* ——— The History of the Rebellion and Civil Wars in England; together with an Historical View of the Affairs of Ireland; now for the first time carefully printed from the original MS. preserved in the Bodleian Library; to which are subjoined the Notes of Bishop Warburton, 7 vols. 8vo, calf, 30.00.

"The conspicuous features of his poetry are its exquisite and original melody of versification, whose very sound chains the ear and soul; the harmonious grouping and idealized coloring of its pictures; statuesqueness and purity of taste in its living figures; and truth, in luxuriance or in simplicity, in majesty or in smallness, in its descriptions of nature. In sentiment he opens, with charming artlessness, his own bosom in sorrow and in joy. . . . while it is evident that his phraseology and his melody still murmur in the finest strains which emanate from the present age." — Scrymgeour.

"In him every word is poetry, and poetry either sublime or pathetic. He does not rise to the sublimity of Milton or Dante, or reach the graceful tenderness of Petrarch, but he has a visionary invention of his own, to which there is no rival. As long as the language lasts every richly gifted and cultivated mind will read him with intense and wondering rapture; and will not cease to entertain the conviction, from his example, if from no other, that true poetry of the higher orders is real inspiration." — Sir E. Brydges.

"To tell his tale copiously and clearly, is the one object of his literary ambition. To exhibit the actors on the scene of life, as the free, but unconscious agent of the Divine will, is the higher design with which he writes: to trace the mysterious intervention of Providence in reforming the errors and abuses of the Christian Church, his immediate end; and to exalt the name of Luther, his labor of love."—Edinburgh Review.

Civil Law in its Natural Order, together with the Public Law, translated into English, by William Strahan, with Remarks on some Differences between the Civil Law and the Law of England, printed entire from the last London edition. In 2 vols. royal 8vo. Edited by the Hon. Luther S. Cushing, late one of the Judges in the Court of Common Pleas, now Lecturer on Civil and Parliamentary Law in Harvard University, 10.00. Boston, 1850

Among the writers on the Roman Law, whose works are the best known to English and American lawyers, and which have exerted the most influence upon our jurisprudence, is Domat: "whose work, entitled The Civil Law in its Natural Order," says Judge Story, (Preface to Bailments,) "considering the age and the circumstances in which it was written, is a truly wonderful performance. His method is excellent, and his matter clear, exact, and comprehensive."

- "Donne may be fairly placed, in point of talent, at the head of the minor poets of his day. Imbued with all the learning of his age, — an active and piercing intellect, — a subtle imagination, — a fancy, rich, varied, picturesque — a mode of expression singularly terse, simple, and condensed, — an exquisite ear for the melody of versification, and a wit admirable, as well for its caustic severity as its playfulness." — Retrospective Review.

- 614 DRYDEN (John). The Works of; now first collected, illustrated with Notes, Historical, Critical, and Explanatory, and a Life of the Author, by Walter Scott, Esq., 18 vols. 8vo, calf, 75.00; another fine copy, full tree calf, 90.00. London, 1808

"The style of Dryden was very superior to any thing England had seen. . . . He seems to have formed himself on Montaigne, Balzac, and Voiture; but so ready was his invention, so vigorous his judgment and so complete his mastery over his native tongue, that in point of style, he must be reckoned above all three. He had the ease of Montaigne without his negligence and embarrassed structure of periods; he had the dignity of Balzac, with more varied cadences and without his hyperbolical tumour; the unexpected turns of Voiture, without his affectation and air of effort." — Hallam.

London, 1800
- 617 ——— The Poetical Works of, with Memoir of the Author by Rev. J. Mitford, 5 vols. 16mo, cloth, portrait, 3.75; half calf, 7.50; full calf, 8.75.
Boston, 1854

"His command of language was immense. With him died the secret of the old poetical diction of England,—the art of producing rich effects by familiar words. The toughest and most knotty parts of language became ductile at his touch. His versification in the same manner, while it gave the first model of that neatness and precision which the following generation esteemed so highly, exhibited at the same time the last examples of nobleness, freedom, (and) variety of pause and cadence. . . . He was, perhaps, the greatest of those, whom we have designated as the critical poets." — Edinburgh Review.

- 619 DU CANGE. Glossarium Mediæ et Infimæ Latinitatis conditum a Carolo Dufresne Domino Du Cange auctum a monachis ordinis S. Benedicti cum supplementis integris D. P. Carpentarii et additamentis Adelungii et aliorum digessit G. A. L. Henschel; in 7 vols. 4to, half calf, and morocco, 75.00.
Paris, Didot, 1840-1850

This new edition, in which all the supplements have been embodied, replaces at a less price the old work of Ducange revised by the Benedictines, and that of the supplement of D. Carpentier, which has now become scarce. It has been revised and augmented by M. Henschel, aided by the information from later authorities. M. de Saulay has completed the article Monnaie, all the designs for which have been redrawn and largely increased; the plates representing the monograms have also been newly added.

full statement of their Possessions, as well Temporal as Spiritual, originally published in Latin. A new edition, enriched with a large accession of materials taken from Leiger Books, Chartularies, Rolls, and other documents preserved in the National Archives, Public Libraries, and other repositories; the History of each Religious Foundation, in English, being prefixed to its respective series of Latin Charters by John Caley, Esq., Sir Henry Ellis, and Rev. Bulkeley Bandinel, D. D., in 8 vols. folio, half morocco, gilt tops, illustrated with portrait, plans, maps, and plates, 175.00. London, 1846

"Good Mr. Dugdale! I confess I was greedy to see and to read your book; and if I had known so much of it as now I do, I should have been more greedy of it; for if I have any skill in any thing, it is by very much the best of any thing that ever I saw in that kind; but that which pleases me in this is that which I would fain have had to be in the Monasticon, things of use and pleasure relating to civil and church affairs, in publicke, or that may be used beyond the direct subject of the book. Sir, I wish from my heart that your book may find that reward and just praise which it deserves. It wants nothing but good times and princes to reward it. Your most thankful and affectionate friend and servant." — Jeremy Taylor.

656 ENCYCLOPEDIA BRITANNICA, or, Dictionary of Arts, Sciences, and General Literature. Eighth edition, revised, enlarged, and brought up to the present time. Edited by Thomas Stewart Traill, M. D., F. R. S. E., Professor of Medical Jurisprudence in the University of Edinburgh. With upwards of 500 engravings on steel, and many thousands on wood. To be comprised in 21 vols. 4to. Vols. I. to XIV. now ready. Cloth, 5.50 per volume.

This edition has undergone careful revision and extensive alterations, so as to accommodate it to the improved taste and advanced intelligence of the times. The editor has secured the coöperation of the most eminent living authors, who have contributed treatises in the various departments of Science, Literature, the Arts, Manufactures, Commerce, Statistics, and General Knowledge, to supersede those now rendered obsolete by the progress of discovery, improvements in the arts, or the general advancement of society.

"It would be impossible, in the limits of an article like this, to speak of particular articles which commend this Encyclopædia to the attention of the reading public. It is full of matter, which no one, who desires to be well informed, can find elsewhere in so compact and desirable a form. The student of history will find it a valuable aid in his researches; the editor will have constant use for it for purposes of reference and extract; the philologist can derive from it many valuable suggestions and facts; in short, it is a work for every one, and no library is complete without it." — Buffalo Courier.

- 666 ERSKINE (Hon. Thomas). Speeches when at the Bar, on subjects connected with the Liberty of the Press, and against Constructive Treasons, 4 vols. 8vo, half calf, gilt, 12.50. London, 1810

"In his capacity of advocate, he possessed the power of summoning upon the instant all the resources of his mind, and bringing them to bear upon the subject before the court with extraordinary effect. In this respect his speeches bear a resemblance to those of Mr. Pitt, whilst they far surpass them in impassioned fervor, in brilliancy of imagination, in copiousness of imagery, in that quality of mind expressed by the emphatic word genius. His dexterity was likewise unrivalled at the bar; and these qualifications, united with a courage which nothing could daunt, and a firmness which was never overcome, rendered him almost irresistible on the defensive side of political persecution."—Encyclopedia Britannica.

- 667 ESCOLANO DE ARRIETA (Don Pedro). Practica del Consejo Real en el Despacho de los Negocios Consultivos, Instructivos, y Contenciosos, con distincion de los que pertenecen al Consejo Pleno ó á cada sala en particular, y las formulas de las Cédulas provinciones y certificaciones respectivas; in dos tomos, folio, 12.00. Madrid, 1796

- 672 ——— The same; second edition, large paper, to match Adams's, Washington's, and Franklin's Works in that size, 6.00. Boston, 1850

"These are remarkable volumes. We know of none like them. . . . There is not a page of these two volumes, from which might not be derived illustrations of a graceful and forcible style."—Christian Register.

"The entire publication now contains eighty-one of Everett's productions, making two of the most substantial and grandly-printed books ever issued from the American press. Each volume has nearly 700 pages of royal octavo size. The paper is good; the margins are broad; the type large and clear: in a word, these are 'books that are books' in good earnest." — Boston Post.

- “Of all the works of imagination to which the English genius has given origin, the writings of Henry Fielding are perhaps most decidedly and exclusively her own. The persons of this story live in England, travel in England, quarrel and fight in England, and scarce an incident occurs, without its being marked by something which could not well have happened in any other country. In strong and natural humor, and forcible yet natural exhibition of character, the father of the English novel remains unapproached as yet, even by his successful followers.” — Sir Walter Scott.

"Few writers have succeeded so well in delineating the aspect of nature in the ever-changing forms which follow the course of the season. There is a charming simplicity in his style quite in keeping with his subject, which impresses us with the conviction that all he describes has been enjoyed, and that enjoyment he conveyed to us with such naturalness, that we derived almost the same delight experienced by the author himself." — Evening Transcript.

- “In his private character Foote was respectable, and the wit and humor of his conversation were very powerful. Dr. Johnson, as Boswell relates, met him for the first time at Fitzherbert's. ‘Having no good opinion of the fellow,’ says he, ‘I was resolved not to be pleased, and it is very difficult to please a man against his will. I went on eating my dinner, pretty sullenly affecting not to mind him, but the dog was so very comical, that I was obliged to lay down my knife and fork, and throw myself back in my chair, and fairly laugh it out. "But no sooner had he spoken for some time, than he was changed into another being. He forgot himself and every thing around him. He thought only of his subject. His genius warmed and kindled as he went on. He darted fire into his audience. Torrents of impetuous and irresistible eloquence swept along their feelings and convictions. He certainly possessed, above all moderns, that union of reason, simplicity, and vehemence, which formed the prince of orators." — Encyclo. Brit.

"Having examined a copy of Francis's Hydraulic Experiments, I feel satisfied, both from the distinguished rank the author holds in the estimation of engineers, and from the thoroughness of the work itself, that no one who wishes to possess a knowledge of the most perfect rules for measuring the flow of water over weirs, and through open channels, and of the sources of error to be guarded against in such measurements, would be willing to do without it, if once acquainted with its contents. The information it contains with regard to Turbines, and the excellent plates which illustrate the text, are far in advance of any thing hitherto published on this subject in the English language." — *E. "If his work be not always history, it is often something more than history, and above it; it is philosophy, it is theology, it is wit and eloquence, it is criticism the most masterly upon every subject with which literature can be connected. If the style be so constantly elevated as to be often obscure, to be often monotonous, to be sometimes ludicrously disproportioned to the subject, it must at the same time be allowed that whenever an opportunity presents itself, it is the striking and adequate representative of comprehensive thought and weighty remark. . . . And it must be confessed, that the chapters of the Decline and Fall are replete with paragraphs of such melody and grandeur, as would be fittest to convey to a youth of genius the full charm of literary composition, and such as when once heard, however unattainable to the immaturity of his own mind, he would alone consent to admire, or sigh to emulate." — Professor Smyth.

"His poetry is not that of an impetuous, but of contemplative sensibility; of a spirit breathing its regrets and recollections, in a tone that has no dissonance with the calm of philosophical reflection. He takes rather elevated speculative views of the causes of good and evil in society, and at the same time the objects that are most endeared to his imagination, are those of familiar and simple interest; and the domestic affections may be said to be the only geni of his romance." — Campbell.

London, 1856

"Mr. Gosse has the art of throwing the purple light of life over the marble form of Science; and while satisfying the learned by illustrations and confirmations of what they knew before, he delights the seekers of knowledge, and even of amusement, by leading them into profitable and pleasant paths which they have not known. The volume ought to be on the table of every intelligent Sea-side visitor. - 854 GOWER (John). Confessio Amantis of, edited and collated with the best MSS., by Dr. R. Pauli, 3 vols. 8vo, cloth, 13.00.
London, 1857

"This English poem is here reprinted in the handsomest form which, perhaps, it ever assumed; and we have seldom seen three octavo volumes bearing so inviting an appearance. They are a fine specimen of modern typography, or we should rather say, of typography of the present day, founded upon the bold, substantial, and masculine looking characters employed by our ancestors about a hundred years ago, rendering the use of spectacles needless, even at a comparatively advanced age. . . . and we see nothing that does not merit praise and admiration. . . . the poem itself well merits the closest study of philologists, with reference to the then condition and subsequent improvement or deterioration of our language. . . . Dr. Pauli has not only availed himself of Caxton's and Berthelet's editions, but of all accessible written resources, including the celebrated copy in the Stafford collection." — Athenæum.

"Of all English Poets (Gray) was the most finished artist. He attained the highest degree of splendor of which poetical style seems to be capable. . . . to the eye of the critic, and more especially the artist, they afford a new kind of pleasure, not incompatible with a distinct perception of the Art employed, and somewhat similar to the grand emotions excited by the reflection on the skill and toil exerted in the construction of a magnificent palace." — Sir James Mackintosh.

- “Mr. Hallam is indeed a stern and severe critic, and the student may be allowed to love and honor many of our patriots, statesmen, and divines, in a more warm and unqualified manner than does Mr. Hallam; but the perfect calmness of Mr. Hallam's temperament makes his standard of moral and political virtue high, and the fitter, on that account to be presented to youthful minds.” — Professor Smyth.

- “Mr. Hallam is, on the whole, far better qualified than any other writer of our time for the office he has undertaken; he has great industry and great acuteness. His knowledge is extensive, various, and profound. His mind is equally distinguished by the amplitude of its grasp, and by the delicacy of its tact. His speculations have none of that vagueness which is the common fault of political philosophy. On the contrary, they are strikingly practical, and teach us not only the general rule, but the mode of applying it to suit particular cases.” — Edinburgh Review.

"A remarkable charm of Herbert's poetry is seen in what may be named the proverbial philosophy of common sense, — the quantity of plain practical wisdom for every-day life, treasured up in the verses of Herbert, has scarcely been considered. The 'Church Porch,' is a little handbook of rules for the management of temper, and conversation, and business, (for life, rather). Every child ought to get it by heart." — Wilmott.

"He is the most joyous and gladsome of bards; singing like the grasshopper, as if he would never grow old. He is as fresh as the spring, as blithe as summer, and as ripe as autumn. We know of no English poet who is so abandonné, who so wholly gives himself up to his present feelings, who is so much heart and soul in what he writes, and this not on one subject only, but on all subjects alike." — Retrospective Review.

"It is long since so graceful and so truly poetical an addition has been made to the body of our literature. The style of their execution, too, is suited to their character. We count upon them, therefore, to do us credit in all respects, at home and abroad; for there is a finish about the poetry, and graceful elegance thrown round its power, that are rare in any country." — North American Review.

"In nothing does Hobbes deserve more credit than in having set an example of close observation in the philosophy of the human mind. If he errs he errs like a man who goes a little out of the right track, not like one who has set out in a wrong one. The Eulogy of Stewart on Descartes, that he was the father of this experimental Psychology, cannot be strictly wrested from him by Hobbes, inasmuch as the publications of the former are of an earlier date; but we may fairly say that the latter began as soon, and prosecuted his inquiries further." — Hallam.

- "He created his art, and used colors instead of language. He resembled Butler, but his subjects are more universal; and amidst all his pleasantry, he observes the true end of comedy, reformation; there is always a moral to his pictures. Sometimes he rose to tragedy, not in the catastrophe of kings and heroes, but in marking how vice conducts, insensibly and incidentally, to misery and shame. He warns against encouraging cruelty and idleness in young minds; and discerns how the different vices of the great and vulgar lead, by various paths, to the same unhappiness. He drew all his stores from nature and the force of his own genius, and was indebted to neither models nor books for his style, thoughts, or hints; and was never successful when he designed for the works of other men. He could not bind his talents to think after anybody else. He could think like a great genius rather than after one." — Lord Orford.

"He is open to all influences, and yields himself with equal pliancy to all. He can call up the most grotesque conceptions, — the most incongruous and ludicrous imagery; whole trains of comic and mirth inspiring fancies wait upon his will without an effort; but he seems to find himself as much at home in the contemplation of serious human emotion — in listening to, or in echoing back, some old and moving story of love and pity, — or letting his thoughts wander with devout gratitude over the beauties of creation, — or in sympathy with the fading glories of old traditions. In not a few of his poems, he has even ventured to commingle these discordant elements, and the quaintest allusions, quips, and cranks of all kinds, stand side by side, with thoughts of earnest interest, and happy, homely, touches of feeling which sink quietly but surely into the heart." — Edinburgh Review.

"Dr. Hooker's Himalayan Journals are another sterling contribution to that high class of literature which has been established by our leading naturalists. In these volumes are contained the results of an amount of mental training that could scarcely have been compressed into a period shorter than the author's life. They are most ably written; they are illustrated by the writer's own pencil and brush in a way that would have maintained his credit if he had gone out only to make sketches, and they contain travelling accounts of temples, tribes, and individuals, of scenery and incidents by the way so graphic that no literary artist in travels, who should have gone out to 'do' the Sikkim and Nepal Himalayas, would be likely to have brought home a more interesting chronicle of his adventures." — Examiner.

"The literary execution of the work is admirable. To watch the life of a man immersed in political discussion, familiar with the contests and intrigues of parliament, and at the same time engaged in the pursuits of science and general literature, and ever indulging himself in placid and majestic thoughts, cannot be otherwise than refreshing; the information imparted by these volumes in regard to the life of Jeffrey, Brougham, Mackintosh, Fox, Pitt, Hallam, Sir Samuel Romilly, Lord Holland, Lord Grenville, Malthus, Charles Bell, Earl Gray, and other public men, is of great interest. Had the volumes before us no other value, (but they are 'rich in political, historical, and philosophical teachings,) they would be worthy of study, as exhibiting the delightful interest of literary men in each other, and the affectionate friendships which are found in scientific associations." — Bibliotheca Sacra.

"These volumes are honorable to the taste, enterprise, and liberality of the publishers, and creditable to the country. They are gratifying evidences of the advance of the country, both in a literary and an industrial point of view; and to their advance we know of none who have more largely contributed than have the enterprising house to whom the public are now indebted for a luxurious edition of a standard work, at a price so moderate as to place it within the reach even of persons of moderate means." — Boston Atlas.

"This new edition — in type, paper, and embellishment superior to any which has yet appeared — embodies the author's last corrections and improvements, together with copious notes, and a short account of his life, written by himself. To descant on the merits of Hume's History of England, after a mature probation of one hundred years, is a task not required at our hands." — National Intelligencer.

"The edition of the History now before us appears in a bright, clear type, with fair margins of strong, white paper; and the Notes at the end of each volume embrace a rich collection of authorities, interspersed with those brilliant, and often oracular sentences, which are the charm of Hume's style." — Christian Examiner.

- 1027 ——— (Rev. A). Learned Societies and Printing Clubs of the United Kingdom, being an Account of their respective Origins, History, Objects, and Constitution, with full details, respecting Membership, Fees, their published Works and Transactions, Notices of their Periods and Places of Meeting, &c., with a general Introduction and elassified Index, crown 8vo, calf, 3.00.

Author, 4 vols. 8vo, cloth, 10.00; half calf, 14.00; full calf, gilt, 16.00. Boston, 1854

"The philosophical writings of Hume are herein issued in a style fully equal to the most finished London publications. In elegance, neatness of style, excellence of paper, and clearness of type, these volumes are not to be surpassed by any thing from even the press of its publishers. Of the merits of the essays themselves it is superfluous to speak. They are already familiar to the republic of letters, and no scholar's library can be regarded as complete without them." — Boston Atlas.

"In some respects Mr. Leigh Hunt is excellently qualified for the task which he has now undertaken. His style is well suited for light, garrulous, desultory and half critical, half biographical, we do not always agree with his literary judgments; but we find in him what is rare in our time, — the power of greatly appreciating and heartily enjoying good things of very different kinds. He has paid particular attention to the history of the English drama from the age of Elizabeth down to our own time; and has every right to be heard with respect on that subject." — Edinburgh Review.

1043 IDLER (The). By Dr. Samuel Johnson, 16mo, cloth, portrait, .75. Boston, 1856

"These Essays, which are very short, and were written with little effort, afford evident marks of the same depth of thought which predominates in the Rambler, although expressed with more ease and familiarity of style, and more general gayety of manner. The chief excellence of the Idler is the dry and grave humor with which public and private folly is exposed."

- 1056 JAMESON'S (Mrs. A.), Sacred and Legendary Art, 2 vols. 8vo, cloth, plates, 7.50; full calf, 10.00. London, 1857

Vol. I. contains, — 1. Legends of the Angels and Archangels; 2. The Evangelists; 3. The Apostles; 4. The Doctors of the Church; 5. St. Mary Magdalen, as represented in the fine arts.

Vol. II. contains, — 6. The Patron Saints; 7. The Martyrs; 8. The Early Bishops; 9. The Hermits; 10. The Warrior Saints of Christendom, as represented in the fine arts.

"Few subjects are of greater interest than the history of Sacred and Legendary Art. It is the symbolism of the Christian faith, a record of the hate which persecuted, of the constancy which overcame, of a gloomy fanaticism, and the subjugation of the old mythology 'that had peopled space with life and mystical predominance,' by another of a purer nature, through the medium of similar agencies. . . . Mrs. Jameson has shown great qualifications in its composition. Her reading is extensive, and confirmed by a personal knowledge of the best works of Art in the most valuable public and private galleries. She perceives at once the striking points in each legend; the feeling which she imparts to her narrative gives it frequently a dramatic interest, and obviates the distates we are apt to feel gradually induced by themes, better suited for the wondering ears of childhood. Her work is essential to those who would study the history of Sacred Art; as one of authority it will be consulted, and whoever wishes to 'share with others those pleasurable associations, those ever new, ever various aspects of character and sentiment exhibited in art,' will find it a source of much instructive enjoyment. It unites knowledge, literary and technical, delicacy of perception of that which is poetical in theme, beautiful in its spiritual expression as a work of art, and will assuredly impart a living interest to many pictures hitherto viewed with indifference, or without pleasure, because without knowledge, feeling, or thought." — London Art Journal.

- “Boswell’s Life of Johnson is one of the best books in the world. It is assuredly a great, a very great book. — Homer is not more decidedly the first of Heroic poets, — Shakespeare is not more decidedly the first of dramatists, — Demosthenes is not more decidedly the first of orators, than Boswell is the first of biographers. He has distanced all his competitors so decidedly, that it is not worth while to place them; Eclipse is first, and all the rest, nowhere. We are not sure that there is in the whole history of the human intellect so singular a phenomenon as this book. Many of the greatest men that have ever lived have written biography — Boswell has beaten them all.” — Edinburgh Review.

- 1077 JOHNSTON (A. K.). The Physical Atlas of Natural Phenomena; a new and enlarged edition, folio, half morocco, gilt leaves, 60.00.
Edinburgh, 1856

“The book before us is, in short, a graphic Encyclopædia of the sciences, — an atlas of human knowledge done into maps. It exemplifies the truth it expresses, that he who runs may read. The Thermal Laws of Leslie it enunciates by a bent line running across a map of Europe,—the abstract researches of Gauss it embodies in a few parallel curves winding over a section of the Globe,—a formula of Laplace it melts down into a little patch of mezzotint shadow,—a problem of the transcendental analysis, which covers pages with definite integrals, it makes plain to the eye by a little stippling and hatching on a given degree of longitude,—all possible relations of time and space, heat and cold, wet and dry, frost and snow, volcano and storm, current and tide, plant and beast, race and religion, attraction and repulsion, glacier and avalanche, fossil and mammoth, river and mountain, mine and forest, air and cloud, sea and sky,—all in the earth, and under the earth, and on the earth, and above the earth, that the heart of man has conceived or his head understood, are brought together by a wondrous microcosm and planted on these little sheets of paper, thus making themselves clear to every eye. In short, we have a summary of all the cross questions of Nature for twenty centuries, and all the answers of Nature herself set down and speaking to us voluminous system dans un mot.” — London Athenæum.

"It is pleasant to know that the critic is not always infallible; this must lie in the fact, that it is not given to any one man to pronounce correctly upon the genius of all men. Had not this been the case, Lord Jeffrey's 'This will never do,' would have sunk Keats into oblivion long ago; — the line he quoted as a specimen to be laughed at has obtained a world-wide celebrity; and we know of no single line that is oftener called into service, or answers so admirably when called, as, 'A thing of beauty is a joy forever,' the popularity of Keats has gone on steadily increasing, and so long as there are young people in the world he will always have an audience." — Literary Gazette.

Such a work must interest every English reader, whether he is a resident in London or in Australia. It treats of the largest city in the world, whose inhabitants are in intercourse, commercial, political, and religious, with almost the whole human race; which has been the scene of the most stirring events of history; which has been a city of progress from its first foundation; which has sent forth its literature through four centuries to the uttermost ends of the earth.

- 1176 LEFEVRE (M. Th.). Guide du Compositeur, par M. Th. Lefevre, in-8, avec vignettes, paper, 3.75.

Cet ouvrage, composé dans le but de former l'instruction typographique des jeunes compositeurs, donne à l'élève, après la connaissance de la casse, la démonstration de ce qui concerne la composition, la distribution, la correction, la mise en pages et l'imposition. On y trouve l'indication des signes algébriques, de géométrie, de botanique, des chiffres romains et des abréviations les plus usitées. On y traite de la composition des frontispices, titres, couvertures, caractères d'écriture, tableaux, algèbre, de l'interlinéaire et du plain-chant. La composition des langues étrangères, latin, italien, anglais, grec, copte, hébreu, arabe, allemand, etc., y est savamment détaillée, ainsi que les fonctions relatives de l'apprenti, des paquetiers, du metteur en pages et de l'homme de conscience. Enfin, un plan de toutes les impositions connues est suivi d'un vocabulaire typographique. De nombreuses vignettes accompagnent la partie démonstrative.

"I am not worthy to praise the mathematician; but his name is mingled in all the problems and discoveries of the times; the masters of the art were his rivals or disciples; and if he borrowed from Sir I. Newton the sublime method of fluxions, Leibnitz was at least the Prometheus who imparted to mankind the sacred fire which he had stolen from the gods." —Gibbon.

1234 LOUDON (J. C.). Encyclopædia of Agriculture; comprising the Theory and Practice of the Valuation, Transfer, Laying out, Improvement, and Management of Landed Property, and of the Cultivation and Economy of the Animal and Vegetable Productions of Agriculture, including all the Latest

Improvements, a General History of Agriculture in all Countries, a Statistical View of its Present State, with Suggestions for its Future Progress in the British Isles; new edition, with upwards of 1,100 engravings on wood, 8vo, cloth, 7.50; half calf, 8.00. London, 1844

- 1235 LONDON (J. C.). Encyclopædia of Cottage, Farm, and Villa Architecture and Furniture; containing numerous Designs, from the Villa to the Cottage and the Farm, including Farm Houses, Farmeries, and other Agricultural Buildings; Country Inns, Public Houses, and Parochial Schools; with the requisite Fittings up, Fixtures, and Furniture, and appropriate Offices, Gardens, and Garden Scenery; each Design accompanied by Analytical and Critical Remarks; new edition, edited by Mrs. Loudon, with more than 2,000 engravings on wood, 8vo, 10.00; half calf, 10.50. London, 1846

- 1236 ——— Encyclopædia of Gardening; comprising the Theory and Practice of Horticulture, Floriculture, Arboriculture, and Landscape Gardening, including all the Latest Improvements, a General History of Gardening in all Countries, and a Statistical View of its Present State, with Suggestions for its Future Progress in the British Isles; illustrated with many hundred engravings on wood, by Branstion; new edition, corrected and improved by Mrs. Loudon, 8vo, cloth, 7.50; half calf, 8.50. London, 1850

- 1237 ——— Encyclopædia of Plants; comprising the Specific Character, Description, Culture, History, Application in the Arts, and every other desirable particular respecting all the Plants indigenous to, cultivated in, or introduced into Britain; new edition, corrected to the present time. Edited by Mrs. Loudon, assisted by George Don, F. L. S., and David Wooster, late Curator of the Ipswich Museum, with upwards of 21,000 engravings on wood, thick 8vo, cloth, 13.50; half calf, 14.50. London, 1855

"The great recommendation of the work has always been its woodcuts, which although only miniatures were nevertheless drawn by Mr. Sowerby with such happy art and so skilfully engraved by Branstion, that the plants could always be recognized even by those little acquainted with the vegetable kingdom. The continuation in the form of supplements is executed in a manner more than worthy of the original, and brings down the subject to the latest possible moment. . . . How many figures the work contains we are unable to ascertain, but we estimate the number of plants actually represented by good wood-cuts as amounting to something more than nine thousand." — Gardener's Chronicle.

"His life was a continual warfare: he was engaged against the united forces of the Papal world, and he stood the shock of them bravely, both with courage and success. He was a man certainly of high endowments of mind and great virtues. He had a vast understanding, which raised him up to a pitch of learning, unknown to the age in which he lived. His knowledge in Scripture was admirable, his elocution manly, and his way of reasoning had all the subtlety that the plain truths he delivered would bear. His thoughts were bent always on great designs, and he had a resolution fitted to go through with them. The assurance of his mind was not to be shaken or surprised; and that παρρησία of his (for I know not what else to call it) before the Diet of Worms, was such as might have become the days of the apostles." — Bishop Atterbury.

History of England, from the Accession of James II.; fifth edition, revised by the Author, with numerous Important Corrections, and the addition of Marginal Notes and Dates, handsomely printed from large clear type, on fine white paper; portrait, 4 vols. 8vo, cloth, 11.00; half calf, 15.00; full calf, 17.00. London, 1852-56

"Mr. Macaulay has a singular felicity of style; and as he moves along his path of narrative spreads a halo around him, which beguiles the distance and dazzles his companions. It is a style undoubtedly, which might often provoke criticism, as far as artistic rules are concerned; sometimes elaborated to excess; sometimes too familiar; with sentences too curiously balanced, and unnecessary antitheses to express very simple propositions. But with all this, and much more of the same kind, that might be said, the fascination remains. The tale, as we proceed, flows on faster and faster, page after page vanishes under the entranced eye of the reader; and whether we will or no, we are forced to follow as he leads—so light and gay and agreeable does the pathway appear. Even on the most beaten ground, his power of picturesque description brings out lights and shadows,—views alike of distances and road-side flowers, never seen or remarked or recollected before. . . . We pay Mr. Macaulay no compliment, but only record his good fortune, when we say, that these volumes are the most popular historical work that ever issued from the English press; . . . for the best rewards of authorship he has not been doomed, like many illustrious predecessors, to await the slow verdict of his own, or the tardy justice of a succeeding generation. Fame has absolutely trodden on his heels. As widely as our language has travelled, these volumes have already spread the reputation and opinions of their author.”—Edinburgh Review.

London, 1834

"The intellectual and moral qualities which are most important in an historian he possessed in a very high degree. He was singularly mild, calm, and impartial in his judgments of men and parties. Almost all the distinguished writers who have treated of English history are advocates. Mr. Hallam and Sir James Mackintosh alone are entitled to be called judges." — Edinburgh Review.

London, 1791

"He introduces every question with perspicuity, states it with precision, and pursues it with easy, unaffected method. Sometimes, perhaps, he may amuse his readers with excursions into paradox, but he never bewilders them into flights of romance. His philosophy is far more just and far more amiable than the philosophy of Paine; and his eloquence is only not equal to the eloquence of Burke." — Parr.

Boston, 1853

"The work is replete with interesting information, comprising copious details with regard to the political and literary history of the times, as well as the private life of the author. Sir James Mackintosh is one of the most imposing names of the last half century, although he has left no production which does complete justice to his active intellect and rare attainments. . . . He will be known to posterity chiefly by these delightful Memoirs, which show him to have been one of the most accomplished of philosophic scholars and statesmen, as well as one of the most lovable of men." — New York Tribune.

- "It is to our taste not only a trustworthy and tolerant narrative of events about which there always has been, and always will be, a good deal of partisan writing on this and on the other side of the Atlantic; but it is a most delightful and readable book. It has all the charms of French memoir-writing, without its trifling, or the still greater drawback of painful suspicion, which rests on French History. Lord Mahon has in these volumes raised himself far above the level of every one who has written on this subject." — North American and United States Gazette.

Milton stands second in English Poetry, as Shakspeare stands first. Of Shakspeare beyond his works we know little or nothing, but all we know of Milton redounds to his honor and glory. He not only wrote beautiful poems, but he lived a beautiful life—an heroic life—there is not another in all English history that was purer or nobler than his. Macaulay says: "We do not envy the man who can study either the life or the writings of the great poet and patriot, without aspiring to emulate, not indeed the sublime works with which his genius has enriched our literature, but the zeal with which he labored for the public good, the fortitude with which he endured every private calamity, the lofty disdain with which he looked down on temptations and dangers, the deadly hatred which he bore to bigots and tyrants, and the faith which he so sternly kept with his country and with his fame."

- 1410 MONTI (Luigi). Grammar of the Italian Language, 12mo, half bound, 1.00. Boston, 1855

This Grammar is pronounced by the most competent judges to be a great improvement on any of the Italian Grammars heretofore published. The one which is now chiefly used in this country, teaches only the spoken language, the language of conversation, which in Italian differs greatly from the language of books. The written language cannot properly be learned from it. Bachi's Italian Grammar, the best that has hitherto appeared, is out of print. But even that was too diffuse, too scientific, and too exclusively classical for the student. The Grammar of Signor Monti is much shorter and simpler, and its examples are not taken altogether from a few old writers, but also from the great modern authors of Italy, whose works more fully represent the present state of the Italian language, and the present mode of thought and expression.

- 1411 MONTI (L.). A Reader of the Italian Language, being Extracts from some of the best Modern Italian Authors, both of Prose and Poetry, with Notes, 12mo, cloth, 1.00. Boston, 1855

It has been the usual custom of those who have compiled Readers to collect small extracts from classic authors, and generally from the old, in preference to modern writers. The editor of this collection has deemed it more useful and also more interesting at the present day, to give extracts from only a few eminent modern authors, and with one or two exceptions, those whose works have not been translated into English.

1467 ——— A Translation of the Gospels, with Notes, 2 vols. 8vo, cloth, 3.00. Boston, 1855

1468 ——— Tracts concerning Christianity, 8vo, cloth, 1.50. Cambridge, 1852

"A great writer and singularly good man, whose reputation in the future will assuredly shine among the brightest and most enduring in our literary history." — Boston Atlas.

"The edifice of Christian evidence he has entirely reconstructed. He maintains the real Christian doctrine respecting the authorship of the Gospels, and that they contain true narratives of our Saviour's life and ministry; and does this with such copiousness of learning, particularly in Greek philosophy and patristic literature; soundness of judgment as to the value of different kinds of testimony, and closeness and clearness of reasoning, that his work may undoubtedly be ranked with Clarke's, Butler's, Lardner's, or any other of the great defenders of the Christian religion." — R. W. Griswold.

"His great work on the Genuineness of the Gospels — a magnificent monument of erudition, logic, and taste — exhausts the argument, supersedes all that before had been written upon it in modern times, and establishes on an immovable basis that cardinal fact in the evidences of Christianity." — John G. Palfrey.

"The Evidences of the Genuineness of the Gospels is a work which few can be competent fully to criticize, but which no person can peruse without confessing the acuteness and strength of its reasoning, the nice discrimination of its criticism, and the precision and purity of its diction. Within the range permitted by the subject, it presents, on the whole, one of the noblest specimens of scholarship and elegance of composition to be found in our youthful literature." — W. H. Prescott.

"Professor Norton has devoted a whole volume full of ingenious reasoning and solid learning to show that the Gnostic sect of the second century admitted in general the same sacred books with the Orthodox Christians. His work on the Genuineness of the Gospels is of a high intellectual order." — Quarterly Review.

"An almost unrivalled monument of patience and industry, of ripe scholarship, thorough research, eminent ability, and conscientious devotion to the cause of truth." — North American Review.

"Sir Francis has the rare merit of giving interest even to dull subjects, and of rendering additionally brilliant those that are confessedly attractive. He writes with ease and grace, often dashing, frequently with pleasant familiarity, and is now and then gossipingly colloquial, occasionally illustrates old deeds by modern and passing instances, and amid it all preserves the dignity of the historian and the calm, unbiased mind of the judge. May he speedily return to us with his remaining Dukes and English Kings, and their successors! The narrative of their lives and deeds is connected with questions which no living writer is better qualified to treat than Sir F. Palgrave." — Athenæum.

- 1514 ——— Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons, 2 vols. 12mo, cloth, 2.50. Boston, 1855

"Parker writes like a Hebrew prophet, enriched by the ripest culture of the modern world. The method of these discourses is practical, addressing their argument to common sense. Atheism and the popular theology are exhibited in their repulsive relations to common life." — Westminster Review.

"Whether we regard him as a writer or speaker we always find him equally profound, original, suggestive, and we may add, that it is very seldom he is not also instructive. He thinks deeply, and fearlessly says what he thinks. Whatever he writes is sure to be read; wherever he speaks he is sure of a large audience, and in the volumes before us we are presented with his ablest efforts." — Philadelphia Daily News.

"Combining thoroughness of research with a picturesque beauty of expression, it presents a fascinating narrative of one of the most pregnant episodes in American history. His diction is copious, free, and impressive, — often highly ornate, but never violating good taste; his descriptions of natural scenery and of military movements are graphic and spirited; and, with more than common powers of grouping and arrangement, he has produced a work whose symmetry and harmonious coloring entitle it to a high place among the recent masterpieces of literary art." — Westminster Review.

"This is one of the best written histories that has been produced by the recent literary talent of America." — Athenæum.

"The romantic adventures, the hair-breadth escapes, the harrowing scenes of Indian treachery, and Indian massacres, are all described in the flowing language, in the vivid colors, and with the lifelike reality, which evince a thorough acquaintance with the fearful details of an Indian war. The peculiarities of the Indian character, their political and domestic regulations, their courage and their cunning, are accurately described by one who has closely studied them in their native forests." — Britannia.

"The war itself abounds with incidents of savage art and wariness, — of civilized courage, skill, and heroism; while the scenes among which it took place form a background new to general history. Nor is Mr. Parkman ill qualified for the task: he is familiar with the scenes where the events occurred; he has a practical knowledge of the Indian character and manners; he has been most industrious and persevering in his researches; and he has a picturesque and animated style." — London Spectator.

Boston, 1854

"Parnell is very happy in the selection of his images, and scrupulously careful in the selection of his subjects. His poetical language is not less correct than his subjects are pleasing. . . . He has considered the language of poetry as the language of life, and conveys the warmest thoughts in the simplest expression." — Goldsmith.

London, 1828

"As to his learning, it was the most profound, and, I may add, the most varied and extensive, of any man of his age. He combined in himself a rare and happy union of qualities that are seldom compatible with each other,—quick perception and sound judgment; retentive memory and vivid imagination; to these he added unwearied assiduity and accurate research. As a classical scholar he was supreme." — Dr. Butler.

London, 1854

"The present edition is incomparably superior to the others no example, to the best of our knowledge, has ever been elsewhere known of an individual who, without prickings of conscience or persuasions of creed, deliberately sate down every evening, and put upon record, not only all the most insignificant events, but all the childish, sneaking, ludicrous, or miserly things and doings which had characterized the past days of his life. . . . Considering how unreservedly and minutely he has anatomized and exposed his own qualities, and what a respectable share of our sympathies he carries off after all, it may, perhaps, be doubted whether many characters would bear the same exposure with as much security." — Edinburgh Review.

- "Beyond a doubt Rabelais was among the deepest as well as boldest, thinkers of his age. His buffoonery was not merely Brutus's rough stick, which contained a rod of gold; it was necessary as an amulet against the monks and legates. Never was there a more plausible, and seldom, I am persuaded, a less appropriate line, than the thousand times quoted
- Rabelais laughing in his easy chair
- of Mr. Pope. The caricature of his filth and zanyism show how fully he both knew and felt the danger in which he stood. I could write a treatise in praise of the moral elevation of Rabelais' work which would make the church stare, and the conventicle groan, and yet would be truth and nothing but the truth. I class Rabelais with the great creative minds of the world,—Shakspeare, Dante, Cervantes, &c."—S. T. Coleridge.
- 1673 RACINE (J.). Œuvres Complètes de, avec les Notes de tous les Commentateurs; cinquième édition, publiée par l'Amé-Martin, avec des additions nouvelles, large paper, royal 8vo, paper, 2.00; half calf, 2.75. Paris, 1844

- 1681 RAMBLER (The), mainly written by Dr. Samuel Johnson, 3 vols. 16mo, cloth, 2.25.

Boston, 1856

"With respect to the plan of the Rambler, he may be surely said to have executed what he intended; he has successfully attempted the propagation of truth, and boldly declared the dignity of virtue. He has accumulated in this work a treasure of moral science, which will not be soon exhausted. He has labored to refine our language to grammatical purity, and to clear it from colloquial barbarisms, licentious idioms, and irregular combinations. Something, he certainly has added to the elegance of its construction, and something to the harmony of its cadence."

— Chalmers.

- 1689 RAPIN's History of England, with Tindall's Continuation to the Death of George I., 5 vols. folio, old calf, 25.00.

London, 1732-'47

"Rapin and Hume are our two great historians; Rapin is important, and always unaffected and laborious — a work which may readily, and ought always, to be compared with Hume — it is full, valuable, and a sort of substitute in the absence of all other writers. Tindall is not unworthy to be the successor of Rapin; equally diligent and copious, with the same attachment to the best interests of Englishmen, and like his predecessor a sort of general substitute in the absence of other writers." — Professor Smyth.

Boston, 1853

"Dr. Ray is, without doubt, the most elaborate author extant on the medical jurisprudence of insanity. He is much more full than any English, French, or German writer, while his work embodies all that is important in the European works heretofore published. . . . Few can read these pages without gaining a deeper knowledge of human nature, and a wider and more liberal view of human infirmity." — Boston Post.

"To the student of Medicine, as well as of Law, this work offers great and indispensable sources of valuable knowledge." — Boston Atlas.

- 1696 READE (Charles). It is Never too Late to Mend; a Matter of Fact Romance, complete in one volume, 1.75.

London, 1857

"Mr. Reade is a master of simple pathos, of powerful eloquence, of striking description; he can make well defined characters talk naturally, and can deliver himself forcibly of generous feelings, and often of great practical good sense. Thousands will read his book with profit. The characters are more on the level of ordinary life than the fascinating Miss Woffington, and the piquant, poetical Christie. Taken together, they are three very remarkable books, displaying great versatility and striking originality." — Spectator.

Sketches of Adherents to the British Crown in the War of the Revolution, alphabetically arranged; with a Preliminary Historical Essay, 8vo, cloth, 2.75. Boston, 1847

"The period of the American Revolution originated, it is well known, a large body of men, who maintained their allegiance to the British crown during that crisis, and who were denominated 'Tories.' It is the design of the present work to present the name and prominent circumstances associated with some of these individuals, gleaned from ancient records, alphabetically arranged; and the work is accompanied by a Historical Essay, exhibiting a general view of the state of parties in the thirteen colonies when the Revolution was commenced. We view the whole work as one of the most valuable contributions to the literature of the country that has ever been made." — Merchants' Magazine.

- "Selden was a person whom no character can flatter, or transmit in any expressions equal to his merit and virtue. He was of so stupendous a learning, in all kinds, and in all languages, (as may appear in his excellent and transcendent writings,) that a man would have thought he had been entirely conversant among books, and had never spent an hour but in reading and writing; yet his humanity, affability, and courtesy were such that he would have been thought to have been bred in the best courts. In his conversation he was the most clear discourser, and had the best faculty in making hard things easy, and presenting them to the understanding, of any man that hath been known." — Lord Clarendon.

- "About the excellence of these poems, there can be no dispute. Next to the dramas, they are by far the most valuable of his works. They contain such a quantity of profound thought as must astonish every reflecting reader; they are adorned by splendid and delicate imagery; they are sublime, pathetic, tender, or sweetly playful; while they delight the ear by their fluency, and their varied harmonies of rhythm. Our language can boast no sonnets altogether worthy of being placed by the side of Shakspeare's, except the few which Milton poured forth, so severe and so majestic." — Rev. A. Dyce.

"Who can restrain admiration of the exhaustless wealth of his mind? His images stream like the opal hued abundance of a sunny waterfall; breaking in music on each other to catch the eye in renovated forms, while it scarce can mark the point whence one sprung from the other. The music of his verse is subtle, intricate, and varied, 'in linked sweetness long drawn out,' like the strain heard by the 'Ancient Mariner,'

- “Skelton is a curious, able, and remarkable writer, and one who was styled, in his turn, by as great a scholar as ever lived, the light and ornament of Britain. . . . With strong sense, a vein of humor, and some imagination, he had a wonderful command of the English language.” — Retrospective Review.
- 1878 ——— The Poetical Works of, principally according to the Edition of the Rev. A. Dyce, 3 vols. 16mo, cloth, 2.25; half calf, 4.50; full calf, gilt, 5.25. Boston, 1856.

“The Skeltonical short verse, contracted into five or six or even four short syllables, is wild and airy. In the quick returning rhymes, the playfulness of the diction, and the pungency of new words, usually ludicrous, often expressive and sometimes felicitous, there is a stirring spirit, which will be best felt in an audible reading, the velocity of his verse has a carol of its own. The chimes ring in the ear, and the thoughts are flung about like corruscations.” — D'Israeli.

- 1887 ——— A Memoir of, by his Daughter, Lady Holland, with a Selection from his Letters, edited by Mrs. Austin, 2 vols. 8vo, cloth, 8.00. London, 1855

"We owe these volumes to the devotion with which the memory of Sydney Smith was cherished by his widow. She who knew well that the world loved her husband for his wit and kindliness, and admired, though insufficiently, his wisdom, knew also that he was loved for only half his worth. The years of her widowhood were supported to the last by the hope, as she wrote, 'of seeing that published of him, which to me far exceeds all the brilliancy of head that the world took cognizance of, but which I least valued, well knowing that the world knew not the perfection of his heart, and his fearless love of truth.' She urged the composition of the memoirs from materials indefatigably collected by himself, on her friend, Mrs. Austin, whose health proved not equal to the task; and at last she died with the desire of her heart unaccomplished, but bequeathing her papers to her daughter, wife of Sir Henry Holland, the physician. Lady Holland has now fulfilled her mother's wish, by writing such a memoir as will enable the world to understand her father's character more nearly in its full integrity. Mrs. Austin at the same time has arranged such of his letters as could honestly be published, and illustrated them with a delightful preface, full of sound and helpful comment." — Examiner.

1888 SMITH, (Dr. William). Dictionary of Greek and Roman Antiquities, illustrated by numerous engravings on wood; 2d edition, royal 8vo, half calf, 5.50. Boston, 1854

1889 ——— Dictionary of Greek and Roman Biography and Mythology, comprising nearly 3500 pages; 3 vols. royal 8vo, (published at 2l. 15s. 6d.),; neat half calf, 16.50.

London, 1849

This work has been conducted on the same principles, and is designed mainly for the use of the same persons, as the "Dictionary of Greek and Roman Antiquities." The articles have been founded on a careful examination of the original sources; the best modern authorities have been diligently consulted; and no labor has been spared, in order to bring the subject to the present state of philological learning. The lives of Painters, Sculptors, and Architects have been treated at considerable length, and an account is given of all their works still extant, or of which there is any record in ancient writers.

1894 ——— Miscellaneous Works of, with Memoir of his Life and Writings, by Robert Anderson, 6 vols. 8vo, half calf, gilt, 15.00. Edinburgh, 1806

"Smollett inherited from nature a strong sense of ridicule, a great fund of original humor, and a happy versatility of talent by which he could accommodate his style to almost every species of writing. He could adopt alternately the solemn, the lively, the sarcastic, the burlesque, and the vulgar. To these qualifications he joined an inventive genius, and a vigorous imagination." — Tytler.

Oxford, 1842

"As a good judge of men and manners, and a careful observer of human life, South deserves the highest praise. His sermons are adapted to all readers and all days; they contain innumerable thoughts and reflections which are true and striking, though not always the most obvious to a common thinker, and this is an unequivocal mark of a good writer.

From him we might form a collection of useful maxims; in which sentiments the most profound and just are delivered in language the most expressive and correct." — Retrospective Review.

"A happy mixture of grave and gay runs through the correspondence, and there is no epoch, and hardly a circumstance in Southey's life which does not receive from his own fertile and fluent pen an unconscious illustration." — John Bull.

- 1913 ——— The Doctor, 7 vols. crown 8vo, full calf, gilt, 27.50. London, 1834-47

"The Doctor' displays Southey on his sportive side — its odd learning and Shandean turn of speculation, exhibits in the character of the Doves, and in a most graceful love story, powers which more sedulously cultivated might have enabled their author in the goodly company of British novelists." — Edinburgh Review.

- 1914 SOUTHWELL (Rev. Robert). Poetical Works, now first completely edited by Wm. B. Turnbull, Esq., 12mo, cloth, 1.12. London, 1856

- 1915 SOUTZO (Alexander). Histoire de la Révolution Grecque, 8vo, paper, 1.75. Paris, 1839

- 1916 SOWERBY (G. B.). Popular British Conchology; a Familiar History of the Molluses Inhabiting the British Isles, small 4to, cloth, colored plates, 2.50. London, 1854

"Mr. G. B. Sowerby maintains the character of his father and grandfather as a naturalist, and has here produced a very instructive volume as an introduction to the study of shells — it will be found a most convenient hand-book at the sea-side, as all the more common shells are not only described but illustrated. It will serve as an admirable introduction to the great work on the British Mollusca by the late Edward Forbes and Mr. Hanley." — Athenæum.

- 1917 SPARKS (Jared). Correspondence of the American Revolution; 4 vols. 8vo, cloth, 12.00; half calf, 13.00; full calf, 15.00. Boston, 1853

"The value of this collection, as illustrative of the writings of Washington, as tending to throw light upon the original facts of history, going back as they do to the highest sources, cannot but be apparent to all who examine these pages. Their writers were among the most prominent actors in the eventful period embraced within the dates we have given. They all wrote with a full knowledge of what was going on around them. Their statements possess a freshness, a weight of authority, an accuracy and interest that make them of the greatest value. Their characters, influence, and agency in the events they describe may often be gathered from their letters. It is, in a word, an invaluable publication, and no library of American history can be complete without it." — Boston Atlas.

- 1918 SPARKS (Jared). The Life of George Washington, 8vo, cloth, 1.50; half calf, 2.50. Boston, 1853
- 1919 — American Biography, second series, complete, with a General Index to the whole, plates, 15 vols. 16mo, cloth or sheep, at 1.00 per vol. Boston, 1844–1847

"Succeeding essayists have presented to the world labors of a similar kind, both in purpose and accomplishment, which have justly entitled them to signal fame, but none of them have provoked or wished to provoke any comparison with the general merit of the Spectator. It has subsisted in the plenitude of its original popularity for nearly a century, and no composition merely human has been so frequently printed and read." — Chalmers.

- 1924 SPENCE (Rev. Mr.). Polymetis, or an Enquiry concerning the Agreement between the Works of the Roman Poets and the Remains of the Ancient Artists, being an attempt to illustrate them mutually from one another, folio, russia, 12.00.

- 1927 ——— The Poetical Works of Edmund Spenser, in five volumes, first American Edition; with Introductory Observations on the Faerie Queen, and Glossarial and Explanatory Notes, by the Editor, (Hon. Geo. S. Hillard) 5 vols. crown 8vo, large paper, half morocco, gilt leaves, 16.50.

Boston, 1839

- 1928 ——— Poetical Works, a new edition, edited by George S. Hillard; beautifully printed on fine paper, with a fine portrait and illuminated title-pages, 5 vols. 12mo, cloth, 5.00.

Boston, 1848

"There is no doubt you have published the best edition of Spenser yet known. But you have, I think, done more than this: you have, it seems to me, published a positively good, useful, and agreeable edition of him; one that will cause him to be read and enjoyed by many classes of persons who would otherwise not have ventured to open its pages." — Extract from Professor Ticknor's notice of this edition.

- 1929 ——— The Poetical Works of, the Text carefully revised and illustrated with Notes, original and selected, by F. J. Child, 5 vols. 16mo, cloth, portrait, 3.75; half calf, 7.50; full calf, 8.75. Boston, 1855

"Spenser's most extraordinary power is that of language, the power of conveying impressions by sounds. It is through the ear more than the eye that he achieves his triumphs, and he makes up by his mastery over this art for many other deficiencies; the pathos of his verse affects us when his sentiments do not. In him, more than any other of our poets, do 'music and sweet poetry agree;' one of the arts is complementary to the other, and he produces some of the effects of both." — See Memoirs.

- 1930 SPIERS (Professor A.). General French-English and English-French Dictionary, newly composed from the French Dictionaries of the French Academy, Laveaux, Boiste, Bescherelle, &c.; from the English Dictionaries of Johnson, Webster, Richardson, &c.; and the Special Dictionaries and Works of both Languages, containing a considerable number of Words not to be found in other Dictionaries, 2 vols. 8vo, sheep, 4.00. Paris, 1853

"At last we have a real French Dictionary; a Dictionary of the Modern French language, as it is written and spoken, compiled by a scholar and man of taste, — the result of fourteen years' study. It is every way worthy the patient and persevering toil devoted to its composition." — London Examiner.

1965 STERNBERG (Baron Von). The Breughel Brothers, Translated from the German by Dr. G. Henry Lodge, illustrated by Billings, small 4to, cloth, 2.00. Boston, 1854

"There are German books that have passages like the taste of the unapproachable German wine, the Tokay of Prince Metternich, which you drink, and bless the grape from which it is squeezed. One of these has just been translated by G. Henry Lodge, of Boston, and published with exquisite illustrations. It is called 'The Breughel Brothers,' and is well described by the translator in his Preface: 'This little volume may properly be called an Aft-novel. The characters are artists; the language is that of art; and the scenes are paintings in words, — so clear and vigorous in their outlines, so brilliant and lively in their details, that any one who can handle a pencil may draw from them pictures as easily as if he had a picture before him.' The translator puts this old wine into new bottles with wonderful preservation of the flavor." — Home Journal.

1966 STEVENS (Rev. W. B.). Home Service, a Manual, intended for those who are occasionally Hindered from Attending the House of God, with Sermons and a Selection of Hymns, 12mo, cloth, 1.25. Philadelphia, 1856

1967 STEWART (Dugald). The Works of, a complete edition, comprising, among other large additions, a Concluding Chapter of his Dissertation, Lectures on Political Economy, etc., etc.; with a Biographical Memoir of the Author, by Sir William Hamilton, Bart., 10 vols. 8vo, cloth, 22.50. Edinburgh, 1854

This collection will not be merely a uniform re-impression of the former publications. These it will, of course, comprise, — following the most authentic edition, with the author's manuscript corrections, and his frequent and important additions; but in the extensive literary remains of Mr. Stewart, besides the writings thus left prepared for the press, there are others which may afford valuable extracts to be incorporated in the already published Treatises, or to be otherwise annexed to them.

- 1968 STILL WATERS. By the Author of Dorothy, 2 vols. 16mo, cloth, 2.75. London, 1857

"Behold! we know not any thing;
I can but trust that good shall fall
At last — far off — at last to all,
And every winter change to spring." — Tennyson.

"The tale is gently, gracefully, pleasingly told, and wins the reader to an interest, which at the close is not disappointed." — London Athenæum.

- 1969 STODDART (Sir John). The Philosophy of Language, comprehending Universal Grammar, or the Pure Science of Language and Glossology, or the Historical Relations of Languages, 3d edition, revised by William Hazlitt, 12mo, cloth, 1.25. London, 1854

- 1970 STORY (Joseph). Commentaries on the Constitution of the United States; with a Preliminary Review of the Constitutional History of the Colonies and States before the Adoption of the Constitution; second edition, 2 vols. 8vo, cloth, 6.50; sheep, 7.50. Boston, 1851

"This new edition of Judge Story's celebrated exposition of the Constitution has just issued from the press of the publishers in an improved shape, and at less than half the price of the first impression. The republication has the benefit of the editorial revision of the son of Judge Story, W. W. Story, Esq., who states that he has carefully revised the text, and has digested and cited all the adjudications of the Supreme Court upon constitutional questions since the publication of the previous edition; and has also referred to such documents and publications as serve to illustrate the Constitution. The politician will find it an instructive manual, to whatever party he may belong. Indeed, every intelligent citizen who justly prides himself on fealty to the Constitution, and who desires to exercise an enlightened conscience in the discharge of his obligations to it, should make himself familiar with this perspicuous, thorough, and comprehensive commentary of Judge Story." — Boston Post.

"This work is to our Constitution all that Blackstone's Commentaries were to the English Constitution. It shows a rare union of patience, brilliancy, and acuteness, containing all the learning on the Constitution brought down to the latest period, so as to be invaluable to the lawyer, statesman, politician, and in fine to every citizen who aims to have a knowledge of the great charter under which he lives." — American Monthly Review.

- 1971 ——— Life and Letters of Joseph Story, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, and Dane Professor of Law at Harvard University, edited by his son, W. W. Story; 2 vols. 8vo, cloth, portrait, 5.00; half calf, 7.50; calf, 8.50. Boston, 1851

"Greater than any law writer of which England can boast since the days of Blackstone." — Lord Campbell in House of Lords, April 7, 1843.

- 1972 ——— The Miscellaneous Writings of, edited by his son, William W. Story; comprising the Autobiography, Course of Legal Study, etc., 8vo, cloth, 3.00. Boston, 1852

"There are few readers who will not find matter of interest to them in the larger part of these miscellaneous pieces. Even in the legal papers, the affluent mind of the author contrived to introduce the richest intellectual dainties. . . . The more we contemplate the character and life and labors of this distinguished man, the more highly do we honor his worth and venerate his virtues." — Christian Examiner.

- 1973 STORY (W. W.). Poems, 12mo, cloth, 1.00. Boston, 1856

"No author in the English Language has enjoyed the extensive popularity of the celebrated Dean of St. Patrick's; neither the local and temporary nature of the subjects on which his pen was frequently engaged, nor other objections of a more positive nature, have affected the brilliancy of his reputation. In spite of the antiquated and unpopular nature of his politics—in spite of the misanthropical and indelicate tone of some of his writings, and the trifling character of others—the vivid and original power of his genius has supported him in the general opinion, to an extent only equalled by his friend Pope, and far surpassing any other of those geniuses who flourished in the Augustan Age of Queen Anne.”—Sir W. Scott.

"An imagination essentially poetical, and sparing none of the decorations which by critical rules are deemed almost peculiar to verse; a warm tone of piety, sweetness, and charity; an accumulation of circumstantial accessories whenever he reasons, or persuades, or describes; an erudition pouring itself forth in quotation till his sermons become in some places almost a garland of flowers from all other writers, and especially from those of classical antiquity, never before so redundantly scattered from the pulpit, distinguish Taylor from his contemporaries by their degree, as they do, from most his successors by their kind." — Hal-lam.

"Sir W. Temple—the man of cultivated mind; the man of sense and humanity; of civilized passions, and well-directed aims; the philosopher and the statesman, appearing on the stage of public affairs only to be honored; retiring to the shade only to be more loved and applauded; the minister who could speak the language of truth and patriotism to his corrupted, dissembling sovereign, nor yet suffer himself, by this sovereign's subsequent conduct, to be hurried into projects of dangerous experiments and doubtful ambition; and who on every occasion converted all the advantages which he had received from nature and fortune, to their noblest purposes; the fair fame and happiness of himself, the honor of his country, and the benefit of mankind." — Professor Smyth.

"This is the best book Mr. Thornbury has written. Being an artist, he writes about art; as a Londoner, with quick eyes and a cultivated taste, he writes of London; as an artist who has travelled, he tells anecdotes and dwells on scenes of his past life abroad. All this he does in a frank and genuine way."—Examiner.

- 2066 THUANUS (Jac. Aug.). Historiæ sui Temporis, fine copy, 7 vols. folio, calf, 32.00. London, 1733

"He left behind him a general history of his own times, from 1545 to 1608, written in very clear and excellent Latin. 'Among other things,' says Grotius to him, 'which posterity will admire, this above all astonishes me, how you, always as it should seem engaged in business, should find leisure and indefatigable force of mind to know so many and great things as you have known, and to write them in such a manner as you have written them;' and, in another place, 'you have comprised a history of the whole world in such a manner as could not have been expected from a man of the most leisure, such is the plenty of your matter, such the elegance of your language.' Isaac Casaubon says, 'That Thuanus seems to him to have been providentially given for an example to the age in which he lived, of piety, sincerity, probity, and, in short, of all virtue and goodness.' Thuanus has acquired immense glory by his history, which, says Perrault, is written with exactness and fidelity beyond example. This biographer adds that he never concealed or disguised the truth; but had a noble and generous boldness for which he has been praised by all the men of his time."—Chalmers.

- "Thucydides imparted the highest dignity to history. With a stern severity of criticism, he applied it to the instruction of others, particularly of statesmen; aimed more at depth and richness of thought than elegance of expression; and although by no means deficient in imagination, he allowed it too little scope, and preferred an antique cast and a rigid precision, to gracefulness of expression. His leading characters detail their motives and views in set formal speeches, because this was the age in which forensic and political eloquence flourished."—Mathiæ.

- 2111 URE (Andrew). A Dictionary of Arts, Manufactures, and Mines; containing a Clear Exposition of their Principles and Practice. New edition, with all the latest improvements; corrected and revised, with 1,241 engravings on wood. 2 vols. 8vo, cloth, 5.00; sheep, 6.00.

"The value of Dr. Ure's Dictionary of the Arts has already been established to the satisfaction of the world of science. It has stood, since its first appearance, without a rival; and has since passed through successive editions, receiving improvement and additions, until it has been swelled from a single volume, of quite moderate dimensions, to its present size, with two large and thick octavo volumes, containing in all upwards of two thousand pages, and giving the most full and complete explanations of all the various terms employed in the arts, together with minute and reliable treatises upon all the known principles and practices employed by manufacturers, miners, and artisans generally. The present edition is, in every respect, a great improvement upon its predecessor. All the articles have been carefully revised and re-written, and with them have been incorporated all the recent improved methods, new discoveries, and desirable changes in their practices.

"Without attempting a critical examination of all the various points of intrinsic merit this dictionary may possess over every other of the kind, it is due to it to say, that, in all that relates to the chemical arts, this work will be found to possess more precision and copiousness than any similar publication. Many curious processes, hitherto veiled in mystery, are described in this edition. In a word, these volumes will be found an inexhaustible fund of knowledge to all directly or indirectly interested in all that relates to, or is connected with, the arts, with mining, or any branch of manufacture." — Boston Atlas.

- "Vasari is the father of the history of painting, and has transmitted to us its most precious materials. Educated in the most auspicious era of the art, he has in some measure perpetuated the influence of the golden age. In perusing his lives, I fancy myself listening to the individuals of whom he has collected the traditions and the precepts. It was thus, think I, that Raffaele and Andrea imparted these facts to their scholars; thus spoke Buonarotti: the friends of Giorgio heard this from Vinci and Porta, and in this manner must have related it to him. I am delighted with the facts, and also with the luminous, simple, and natural manner in which they are expressed, interwoven with the technical terms that originated in Florence, and worthy of every writer whose subject is the fine arts." — Lanzi's History of Painting.

Nouvelle édition, comprenant en plus la guerre d'Espagne en 1823, la bataille navale de Navarin, l'expédition de Morée, la conquête de l'Algérie, la révolution de 1830, le siège d'Anvers, 1832, l'occupation d'Ancôte, la révolution de février 1848 et la guerre d'Orient, 1854. Environ 15 vol. in-8, avec près de 200 planches, cartes, plans de bataille, etc. Prix du volume, 1.25. (Les tomes 1 à 8 sont en vente.)

Le but de cet ouvrage a été de retracer tous les faits d'armes que présente cette époque féconde en événements militaires si glorieux pour la France. C'est un monument consacré à la mémoire de tous les Français qui ont fait admirer dans les combats leur courage et leur génie. — L'Europe conjurée a vaincu la France, mais elle n'a pu lui ravir l'estime des peuples, ni sa propre estime, ni ses glorieux souvenirs; et c'est à la puissance de ces souvenirs qu'il faut attribuer le prodigieux succès de la première édition de cet ouvrage.

"Let it be considered what it is to have the management of a revolution, and afterwards the maintenance of order. Where is the man in the history of our race has ever succeeded in attempting successively the one and the other? not on a small scale, a petty state in Italy, or among a horde of barbarians, but in an enlightened age, when it is not easy for one man to rise superior to another, and in the eyes of mankind —

"A kingdom for a stage,
And monarchs to behold the swelling scene."

The plaudits of his country were continually sounding in his ears, and neither the judgment nor the virtue of the man was ever disturbed. Armies were led to the field with all the enterprise of a hero, and then dismissed with all the equanimity of a philosopher. Power was accepted, was exercised, was resigned, precisely at the moment and in the way the duty and patriotism directed. Whatever was the difficulty, the trial, the temptation, or the danger, there stood the Soldier and the Citizen, eternally the same, without fear and without reproach, and there was the man who was not only at all times virtuous, but at all times wise." — Professor Smyth.

"This work is of the highest utility; volumes one and two contain a complete catalogue of authors and their works, editions, sizes, and prices; volumes three and four constitute an index or key to all that has been written on every subject.

- 2186 WATTS (A. A.). Lyrics of the Heart, with other Poems, with 41 engravings on steel, crown 8vo, cloth, 6.00; morocco, extra, gilt, 14.00. London, 1851
- 2187 ——— (Isaac). Horæ Lyricæ and Divine Songs, with a Memoir by Robert Southey, 16mo, cloth, portrait, .75; half calf, 1.50; full calf, 1.75.

"Of Watts's poetry one can praise the design but not the execution, though Cowper professed to find excellent poetry in his verse. The author of the Olney Hymns, which are about the level of Watts's, may be pardoned for such natural blindness." — Cunningham.

- 2188 WEBER (Henry). Metrical Romances of the Thirteenth, Fourteenth, and Fifteenth Centuries, published from Ancient MSS., with an Introduction, Notes, and Glossary, 3 vols. crown 8vo, half olive morocco, 10.00. Edinburgh, 1810
- 2189 ——— Tales of the East, comprising the most Popular Romances of Oriental Origin, and the best Imitations by European authors, with new Translations and additional Tales never before published, to which is prefixed an Introductory Dissertation, containing an Account of each Work, and of its Author or Translator, 3 vols. royal 8vo, full calf, neat, very scarce, 12.50. Edinburgh, 1812
- 2190 WEBSTER (Daniel). The Complete Works of; with a Memoir by the Hon. Edward Everett, ninth edition, five steel engravings, 6 vols. 8vo, cloth, 12.00; sheep, 13.50; half calf, gilt, 18.00; full calf, 21.00. Boston, 1856

"These volumes are a collection of imperishable models in constitutional law, jurisprudence, international law, diplomacy, finance, legislation, and literature,—a collection not to be matched by this, and hardly by any other country, in capital and multiform excellence. There is not a page in these books which may not give the world assurance of a transcendent intellect; not a page which will not make posterity prouder of the land of their fathers. These productions will be perpetuated as long as the English language endures."—New York Courier and Enquirer.

"In company with the writings of Washington and Franklin, they constitute a most essential part of the history of our republic. No lapse of time can destroy their value, so long as the world shall feel an interest in knowing how the greatness of the American Nation was built up and preserved, and how the genius and spirit of the people in the nineteenth century were embodied and personified in one eminent individual,—emphatically the AMERICAN STATESMAN."—Boston Courier.

"We shall not attempt to mention, or even hint at, the deservings of Mr. Webster, still less to compare him with other men. There is a shorter course, which is, to invite the community to weigh and value them for themselves. There are his works, such of them as have been collected. There they stand. They shall speak for him. They want only to have readers in order to create admirers."—Newark Daily Advertiser.

- 2191 ——— Memorial. A Memorial of Daniel Webster, from the City of Boston, edited by George S. Hillard, 8vo, cloth, 1.25. Boston, 1853

"It is beautifully printed, and a worthy memorial of the great statesman, from the city of his adoption."—Boston Transcript.

- 2192 ——— Private Correspondence of, edited by Fletcher Webster, 2 vols. 8vo, cloth, 2 portraits, 4.50; half calf, 6.50; full calf, 7.50; the same on large paper, 6.00. — Boston, 1857

"The private correspondence is the great charm of the volumes, and is most delightful reading. It shows that Daniel Webster was truly good as well as essentially great. No one can read these volumes without admiring Mr. Webster and having his own tastes genialized and refined."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

"It is, in all the characteristics we should wish to find in such literary treasures, the richest collection of letters ever preserved and published to illustrate the character of the foremost statesman of his age, or of any who have enlisted and concentrated upon themselves the eyes of the public in America or in Europe."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

- 2193 WEBSTER'S TRIAL. Report of the Case of Professor John W. Webster, indicted for the Murder of Dr. George Parkman, before the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts. By

GEORGE BEMIS, Esq., one of the Counsel in the case, 8vo, sheep, 2.50. Boston, 1850

"It was chiefly from the conviction that a complete and accurate Report of the entire proceedings, in the case of Professor Webster, ought to be attempted by some one familiar with the case, in view of the extraordinary sensation created by it, as well without as within the legal world, and in view of the misinformed criticism passed upon it in all parts, — more especially in reference to the conduct of the jury-trial, — that the undersigned, after the ascertainment of the fact that no existing report could be pointed to as a full and reliable source of reference, and that no other person was likely to attempt it, took upon himself the task of preparing the present volume. Considering the sources of information to which he has had access, and the aids of which he has been able to avail himself, he trusts that it will not be regarded as presumptuous in him to express the belief, that he offers to the public an authentic and reliable account of this interesting case in all its details." — Extract from the Preface.

- "Kirke White's poetry is popular because it describes feelings, passions, and associations which all have felt, and with which all can sympathize. It is by no means rich in metaphor, nor does it evince great powers of imagination, but it is pathetic, plaintive, and agreeable; and, emanating directly from his own heart, it appeals irresistibly to that of his reader."

Noctes Ambrosiana, 4 vols.

"The result is a series of dialogues in exuberance of life delightful, in dramatic truth perfect; full of the most salient descriptions, the most searching criticism, withering satire, manly pathos, and broadest humor." — The Times.

Essays, Critical and Imaginative, 3 vols.

To be followed by

Recreations of Christopher North.

Poems, a complete Edition.

Tales, a new Edition.

Lectures on Moral Philosophy.

- 2229 ——— (Walter). Memoirs of the Life and Times of Daniel Defoe, containing a Review of his Writings, and his Opinions upon a variety of Important Matters, Civil and Ecclesiastical. 3 vols. 8vo, calf, gilt, portrait, 13.50. London, 1830

"That De Foe was a man of powerful intellect and lively imagination is obvious from his works; and the events of his life prove him entitled to the praise of integrity, sincerity, and unvaried consistency." — Sir W. Scott.

- 2230 WINCKELMAN (John). The History of Ancient Art, Translated from the German, with a Life of Winckelman, by G. H. Lodge, 2 vols. imperial 8vo, illustrated with plates, 6.00.
Boston, 1856

"Winckelman created for himself an original style. Equally removed from hardness and stiffness as from ornament and diffuseness, it manifests its beauty by repose and quiet grandeur, like Xenophon's writings and the sculptures of high art, which seem to have served him as a model. With simple means and gentle movements, he produces wonderful representations, all of which may be called beautiful in their kind, so different are they in their peculiar character, like the youthful and adult, the terrestrial and celestial, divinities of the Greeks. In narration, brief without scantiness; in criticizing, accurate and acute; in teaching, circumstantial and clear; cautious in refuting; artless in comparing; he becomes grand when treating of beauty, and the essential of art; and in his Reflections on the Apollo, Hercules, Laocoön and Niobe, he soars until his enthusiasm equals that which first created them." — See Life, etc.

- 2231 WINGED THOUGHTS; a Series of Sonnets, by M. A. Bacon, with Illustrations drawn on Stone, by C. L. Bateman, designed and printed in colors, by Owen Jones, royal 8vo, embossed calf, 9.00.
London, 1851

- 2232 WINTHROP'S (Hon. Robert C.) Speeches and Addresses on Various Occasions. 8vo, cloth, 3.00.

"The contents of this volume are varied and miscellaneous, covering a wide range of subjects, and manifesting upon all of them the large information and pure taste of the well-trained scholar, as well as the fluent manner and ready logic of the practised debater. . . . The volume is an honorable record of its author's long term of public service, an explicit avowal of his political opinions and preferences, and a fair and creditable specimen of the ability with which he has maintained them." — North American Review.

- 2233 ——— (John) History of New England, from 1630 to 1649. First Governor of the Colony of the Massachusetts Bay. From his original manuscript, with Notes, by James Savage, new edition, 2 vols. 8vo, cloth, 4.50.
Boston, 1853

"There are several circumstances that give a peculiar interest to this work, and that ought to insure to it a wide circulation, as they certainly will a permanent existence. In the first place, the author was among the chief of an immortal band of worthies, with whom was deposited the germ of a nation's prosperity to the end of time, — a nation, too, with which were to be identified the best hopes of the world. He was possessed of noble qualities of both mind and heart, and left a bold, bright mark on our civil and religious institutions, that time has done little to wear out. He was an accurate observer of every thing that happened; and the record of his observations, being made when they were fresh, had every advantage for being accurate. He descends to great particularity and minuteness, incidentally bringing out many things, which, though unimportant in themselves, are strikingly illustrative of the character of individuals and the manners and usages of the day." — Puritan Recorder.

"The narrative of Winthrop is curious for its particularity and precision, and gives a sort of daguerreotype picture of the times in New England, during the nineteen years in which he occupied himself with noting down public affairs in his journal." — New York Evening Post.

- 2234 WISHAW (Francis). Analysis of Railways: consisting of a series of Reports on the Railways projected in England and Wales in the year 1837, to which are added a Table of Distances from the proposed London Termini, to eight well-known places in the Metropolis, with Glossary and several useful Tables. 8vo, cloth, 2.00. London, 1838

- 2235 WITH (Emilé). Railroad Accidents, their Causes and the Means of Preventing them, with an Introduction by Auguste Perdonnet. Translated with an Appendix by G. F. Barstow, 12mo, cloth, 1.00. Boston, 1856

"We recommend a careful study of this invaluable work of Mr. With to every railroad director, conductor, engineer, and stockholder, and to the whole travelling public." — Boston Daily Journal.

"This is an excellent translation of a scientific essay by an accomplished engineer on the subject of Railroad Accidents. We commend it to all persons interested in the great national subject of railroads." — Boston Daily Advertiser.

Athenæ Oxoniensis; an Exact History of all the Writers and Bishops who have had their Education in the University of Oxford; to which are added the Fasti, or the Annals of the said University; a new edition, with Additions and a Continuation by Philip Bliss, 4 vols. royal 4to, fine copy, calf extra, 55.00. London, 1813

- 2238 WOODBURY (Hon. Levi). Miscellaneous Writings of, Political, Judicial, and Literary, now first selected and arranged, with portraits, 3 vols. 8vo, cloth, 6.00. Boston, 1852

"These volumes present a fair illustration of the varied powers of Judge Woodbury's intellect. He was eminently a thorough man. He brought to the investigation of subjects an indefatigable industry which left no stone unturned until he had mastered the whole of it. To this was united rare powers of analysis. Hence his speeches and legal opinions are not only full of facts, but facts formed in solid, compact, impregnable argument, and presented in a manner at once comprehensive and minute, evincing scholarship and sound judgment. The works before us bear ample evidence of large learning and varied attainments. They have been got up in the usual admirable style of the well-known publishers, Messrs. Little, Brown & Co., and are well worthy of a place in every American Library." — Boston Post.

Boston, 1854

"Wordsworth is indisputably the most original poet of the age; and it is impossible, in the very nature of things, that he can ever be eclipsed. From his golden sun other orbs may draw light; but still it will be said of him —

' — Then shone the firmament
With living sapphires. *Hesperus, who led
The starry host, rode brightest.*'
Prof. Wilson.

"This book ought to be largely circulated, not only on account of its scientific merits — though these, as we have in part shown, are great and signal — but because it is popularly written throughout, and therefore likely to excite general attention to a subject which ought to be held as one of primary importance. Every one is interested about fishes, — the political economist, the epicure, the merchant, the man of science, the angler, the poor and the rich, — we hail the appearance of this book as the dawn of a new era in the natural history of England." — Quarterly Review.

- 2262 YOUNG, (Alexander). Chronicles of the First Planters of the Colony of the Massachusetts Bay, in New England, from 1623 to 1635, now first collected from Original Manuscripts and unpublished Records, and illustrated with Notes, 8vo, with a portrait of Governor Winthrop, cloth, 2.50. Boston, 1846

"The volume now before us is a labor of love of the same character in behalf of the old Bay Colony. No other State in the Union, no other colony, no other country in the world, can produce such records of its origin as Massachusetts possesses in this volume. The original documents, taken in connection with the editor's notes, make up a book which its possessors will highly prize. We close with a renewed expression of our obligations to Dr. Young for all his labors in deciphering, collating, and illustrating the Chronicles of the Pilgrim Fathers." — North American Review.

"Dr. Kerr's edition deserves commendation for the extreme fidelity with which Blackstone is reproduced. He does not mutilate his author. Nothing is changed or left out, except where a change in tense is necessary, in consequence of statements being no longer true, which were true in Blackstone's time. Mr. Kerr's part has been confined to additions, and these have evidently been made with laborious care." — Saturday Review.

- 2294 BORROW (George). The Romany Rye; a Sequel to Laven-gro, 2 vols. crown 8vo, cloth, 6.50. London, 1857

"The author states that one of his favorite pursuits was to hunt after strange characters: and it is as a series of sketches of English scenes and English people that, in our opinion, its great value consists. Every one acquainted with the lower orders of this country, must pronounce the descriptions to be as accurate as they are picturesque. They abound in dramatic and delicate strokes of nature, of which no extracts give an adequate idea, and are painted with a force that bring men, events, and prospects before the eye with the vividness of reality. In this power of verbal delineation Mr. Borrow has never been outdone." — Quarterly Review.
